his head, and there was shence while he prayed.

First Selectman Jefferson Foster came forward when the prayer was ended. His round red face was redder than usual, and when he removed his stiff hat beads of perspiration stood out on his forchead. He took the roll of reanisarint from his pocket and surmanuscript from his pocket and surmanuscript from his pocket and surveyed the company with a wavering eye. When his glance met the slightly contemptuous smile of the reporter from New York he started violently and unrolled his papers nervously. The first selectiman was suffering painfully from stage fright. He looked at the opening lines of his carefully prepared speech and then concentrated his gaze upon a solitary vehicle wending its way slowly up the dusty road.

"Friends and fellow country men." began the selectman in a husky growt.
"this is a great occasion—a great occasion," he repeated, confidently evading a synical gleam in the reporter's eye,
"for which we are indebted to our esteemed townman, Dr. Liscom." Jefferson Foster's eye wandered again and encountered the grinning reporter's face. "A hero is sleeping in our midst. Today we are to honor the bravery and daring of our esteemed citizen Theron Bassett, killed on the field of duty. A year hence we hope to erect a sultable monument to his memory"—

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely. Children do not need stimulating." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla as a tonic for the young. Follow his advice. rising high above the tumult, angry and expostulating, interruped the selectman's speech. "I tell you I'm going up front! This thing has got to be stopped!"

A murmur of indignation followed the speaker as she pushed her way through the crowd and finally emerged into the open space about the grave. She was a tall, rawboned woman, with strongly marked features and iron gray hair drawn tightly back from her forehead.

"What do you mean by this disturbance, madam?" asked Dr. Liscom severely. oster. "Found the grave yet?"

identity of a real hero of the Revolutionary war. In his genealogical researches the good doctor had come across the mention of one Theron Bassett of Pond Point, who had enlisted and afterward died fighting on the 27th of August, 1776, in the battle of Long Island.

Notwithstanding the fact that Theron Bassett had appeared to be the only patriotic soul among the hundreds that had populated Pond Point in those early days, with commendable ardor The reporter took a notebook from his pocket and reflectively sharpened a pencil.

There was to be a grand parade and speechmaking on the green where the churches formed a triangle. There was to be an oration at the grave delivered by the first selectman himself, followed by the sounding of "taps" over the resting place of the neglected hero. At last the honor of Pond Point was to be vindicated. Dr. Liscom had a cousin who knew a man who was a reporter on a New York paper. This reporter was enjoying his annual vacation, but he had reluctantly consented to appear. Had he known what was in store for him he might have accepted the assignment with more grace. The eventful morning dawned warm and muggy, with the promise of in-tense heat later on.
"This is a proud day for Pond Point," remarked Dr. Liscom as he prepared to enter the carriage drawn up at the sidewalk.

"The greatest day ever," responded the first selectman, puffing nervously at his huge cigar. "We've been waiting a long time, doctor, but today we'll show some of those other fellows what Pond Point can do! They say there's a big crowd from Leetown and Scatterbrook up at the green now." He panted into a seat beside the doctor and fumbled at the roll of manuscript in his pocket.

"Pond Point seems fated to play a passive part in the history of her country. So be it! Let us be content to be good citizens, heroes in our humble way, and perhaps we may so conduct ourselves in time of untional distress our descendants may honor our memories even as we would honor the memory of some great man! DANCING STARS. The Twinklers Seem to Jump When Viewed Through a Telescope.

Niewed Through a Telescope.

One of the most interesting things appearing in the telescope when that instrument is pointing heavenward is the appearance of jumpling stars. Of course we can see stars twinkle without a telescope, but with a telescope they may be seen to jump and actually to dance. The cause is the samemixing currents of light and heavy air causing refraction or bending of the rays of light coming from the star. We can see the same phenomenon by looking at a small object in a room through the air directly over a hot radiator. The object seems to jump and dance as if playing hide and seek with itself.

This jumping in the telescope or winkling to the naked eye has also been explained by what is called interference. If two sources of light are placed close to each other, then on a screen placed properly we can catch any descendant of Theron Bassett, who"—

"Fiddlesticks!" interrupted the woman rudely.

The reporter scribbled bustly in his workeds with the self.

This jumping in the telescope or twinkling to the naked eye has also been explained by what is called interference. If two sources of light are placed close to each other, then on a screen placed properly we can catch an alternate band of white and dark lines. Of course if the eye be placed at a dark line it can see neither source of light. The production of these dark lines is accomplished by different light waves reaching the screen in opposite phases so as to blot out or can posite phases so as to blot out or can-cel the effect due to each. Amid loud applause the gathering made its way to the grove, while the reporter replaced his notebook in his pocket and thanked the doctor for the privilege of attending such an interesting occasion, and the good doctor and other members of the committee swallowed hard when they saw the alert young man sprinting up the road to catch the noon train, for they knew that the honor of Pond Point was at the mercy of his pencil.

In the churchyard Jared Wilson surveyed the decorated mound in silence. Once he put forth his hand to tear the flags and flowers from their place, but he drew back.

"If he was a good dog the flags won't hurt him any," he muttered as he followed the committee to the picnic grove.

Old Samurai Blades Are Looked Upon as Sacred.

HANDLED WITH REVERENCE.

A Curious Formula of Etiquette Fol-lows When "the Steel Bible of Bushido" Is Drawn From Its Sheath by a Hand Which Grasps It In Peace

If one were in a friend's house in Japan and should ask to examine one of the old samurai swords that rest in the lacquered sword rack in a place of honor there a curious formula of cocabulary, is to prevent the deflic-ment of the handle by a hand which grasps it in peace. The bow is meant for the spirit of the swordsmith who forged this weapon. The reverence is for the sword itself, "soul of the sa-nural." In the Japanese poetical con-ception and aptly called by foreigners "the steel Bible of Bushido." But this is only the beginning of the formality. When the Japanese host dusheaths the blade he does it with the edge toward his own body and the point directed away from his guest.

Japanese, who have not forgotten the inany centuries of chivalry and of hand fighting behind them, the delicately curved and curiously welded sword of the samural has a significance almost sacred. There is a philosophy of the sworn no less stern than the use of the weapon.

In the old days when the Japanese fighters were the war masks and the steel armor seen nowadays in the curiosity shops the boy was taught

The edge of the blade is hard with the finest temper, the body and back of a milder temper, sufficient to give some elasticity. A Japanese sword cannot be bent half double with the pressure of a hand; it is nearly rigid. Though sword manufacture has ceased to be in Japan today outside of the government arsenals, which turn out only the accepted military blade of the modern army, the country is filled with prized relics of the past art, and these are relics which the Japanese will not are relics which the Japanese will not sell. A possessor of one of the old swords, keen and blue white in juster as the day it was forged, would sell his house, even himself maybe, before he would part with his iron Bible of Bushido for money.—Japan Magazine.

AMES IS A CANDIDATE.

Last Sunday night Congress-man Butler Ames of Lowell came out flatfooted with an announc-ment of his candidacy for Cabot Lodge's seat in the U. S. Senate. Lodge's seat in the U. S. Senate.

His speech was vitriolic in the extreme. He denounced the Senator and the Republican State Commencement festivities last week.

Senator and the Republican State organization, which he called The Machine,"in bitter language, and declared that it was his intentions to give both of them fits.

The one simple fact that Ames honestly thinks he is big enough to fill Lodge's shoes in the Senate is proof positive that he isn't fit for the place. It shows a lack of judgment which disqualifies him for a seat in the U. S. Senate. The Senate Report on the High Cost of Living

STATE COMMISSION SUSTAINED

Hon. W. S. McNary Denies That H Is a Candidate Against Congressman O'Connell-President Taft as Massachusetts Resident

The report of the special committee on the part of the United Sates sentate to investigate the high cost of living, has corroborated the views of the Massachusetts commission appointed to make investigation along the same lines, and finds that the tariff is not responsible for the increase. How any other conclusion is possible it is difficult to conceive. As a matter of fact, it seems to be capable of demonstration that the Payne tariff act, passed in 1909, was in the aggregate a reduction of duties. Few duties were raised and a large majority of duties were unchanged or lowered. If the tariff governed prices it would certainly be reasonable to expect that when The report of the special committe ly be reasonable to expect that when the general trend of duties was lowthe general trend of duties was low-ered, the prices of commodities sub-ject to duty would decline. Such, however, has not been the case. Prices have increased steadily, some of these increases being largest on commodities which are on the free list, commodities which are on the free list, and therefore pay no duty.

The Cost of Farm Products

The senate committee finds that there is an increased cost in the production of farm products by reason of higher land values and higher wages. These naturally result in higher prices for these reductions. It is also found. for these productions. It is also found that there is increased demand for farm products and food commodities and this demand results in increased cost to the consumer.

A rush of immigration to food-consuming rather than a food-producing.

suming rather than to food-producing ocalities is regarded as another factor localities is regarded as another factor which has tended to higher prices.

The committee has also found that reduced fertility of land has resulted in lower average production or to increased expenditure for fertilization. There are also increased banking facilities in agricultural localities which enable the farmers to hold their crops and market them to the best ad-vantage. While this has steadled prices it has had a tendency to infuced supply of such commodities as lumber convenient to transportation facilities, resulting in higher prices by reason of the increased expense of transportation. It is found also that cold storage mants result in preventing radical fluctuations in prices in certain commodities with the seasons, which enables the wholesalers to buy and sell at the best possible advantage and has a tendency to advance prices. It costs more to distribute goods, while industrial combinations, organizations of producers and of dealers and other causes add to the cost of the necessities of life.

The increased money supply is also umber convenient to transportation

The increased money supply is also large factor in the problem, while -capitalization and a high stand-

McNary May Not Be Candidate
There has been a little burst of interest in the Tenth congressional district over the announcement that former Congressman William S. McNary of South Boston would be candidate against Congressman Joseph F. late against Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell. Either the announcement O'Connell. Either the announcement was premature or Mr. McNary has had a sober second thought, for he now states that he has not said he would be a candidate as yet. Of course, this leaves the door open to him for announcing his candidacy later, but the friends of Mr. O'Connell do not believe he will enter the fight.

do not believe he will enter the light, for they say it would be a lost cause from the start.

The only two candidates in the fight who seem to cut much of a figure are Congressman O'Connell and Councilman Curley. Both men are understand to be already affiliated with May. The seems as if Massachusetts might

It seems as if Massachusetts might well take pardonable pride in the fact that she is again to have as a summer guest President William H. Taft. It looks like no small compliment that for two successive seasons the summer capital of the country should be within her borders. Beverly will again be the center of interest in the nation for two months at least, which further emphasizes the advantages of this coast as a summer resort. Few presidents have been more active than Mr. Taft. Next Monday he will visit Somerville and review the Fourth of July parade there, and address the National Educational association later at a great mass meeting in the Harvard Stadium, across the river from Cambridge. If he reviews the Fourth of July parade in Boston, this will still further extend his activities on that day. The Salt Charm Failed.

Some three years before the Franco-German war broke out Count Seckendorff accompanied King William I, on his visit to Napoleon III, and was present at the celebrated dejeuner given in the Pavilion de Diane at Fontainebleau. King William, who was sitting next the empress, was asked by her to pass the salt, and in complying with this request he threw a little salt over his shoulder. Upon the empress exclaiming, "Why do you do that?" the king explained that in his country it was the custom to do so when passing the salt to ward off bad luck and any chance of a quarrel. The empress in a prettily turned speech at once replied. "But surely there is no danger of anything interfering with our friendship." In less than three years the Germans had crossed the Rhine.—London Spectator.

Why Not Pass the Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than over, and, though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should Why Not Pass the Plate? Instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should read, "The collection yielded $4,000.000." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars.—Life.

The Harm of Damp Houses.

It is daugerous to health and even to life in a damp, moldy house or one built over a moldy cellar. Many years ago the London Lancet in an article on diphtheria traced the disease in certain molds and fungoid growths which seemed to be breathed into the threat seemed to be breathed into the throat Remember, one of the best disinfed tants is lime. Moldy cloths, such as shoes and other articles that are unfit for use, should be destroyed at once.

The Uses of Rubber.

It is probable that no other commodity eyer came into such varied use within so short a period as india rubber. First employed practically for footwear and other waterproof apparel. rubber has come to be employed in electrical insulation, hose pipes for the conveyance of water, steam, air and so on; pneumatic and other tires for al sorts of wheeled vehicles, balloons and sorts of wheeled vehicles, balloons and the planes of aerial machines, innumeral articles for the comfort of invalids, household conveniences and what not. Thus far rubber has never come into use to an important extent for any given purpose to which it is not still devoted. In other words, its advantages are so marked in many uses that when once introduced no substitute can be found for it.—Cassier's Magnzine.

Odd Hair Styles.

Some of the New Hebrides people do their hair up in a bunch on the top of the head and stain it yellow, while the inhabitants of the Ombai islands pass it all through a tube so as to make a kind of plume. The Marquesas make a kind of plume. The Marquesas chief's favorite method is to shave all the head except two patches, one over each temple, where he cultivates two horns of hair. No doubt this is to render him more a thing of terror to his enemies than admiration to his friends. His reason for shaving the rest of the head is to allow more space for tattooing, as if all the available skin of the body were not enough.

Lore of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. Of the five leaved clover it is declared that if it be worn on the left side of a maiden's dress or fastened behind the hall door the Christian name of the first man who enters will be the same as that of the future has land. The nower of the four leaved love is a guille. That is why the ancient beyond.

The Eyes of the Musk Ox.

The skuli of the bull musk ox is remarkable for the development of the eye orbits, which project sufficiently beyond the plane of the frontal bones to compensate for the interruption the horns would otherwise make in the range of vision. Egypt Would Be a Wilderness but For This Wonderful Stream.

The Nile is probably the most wonderful river in the world. It has made Egypt possible by turning an arid wilderness into the richest land in the world. It has provided at the sam time an admirable commercial high time an admirable commercial high-may and made easy the transportation of building materials. The ancient Egyptians were thus enabled to utilize the granite of Assuan for the splen-did structures of the hundred gated Thebes and of Memphis and even for those on Tanis, on the Mediterranean coast.

British isles were clad in skins of wild beasts and offered human sacrifice beasts and offered human sacrifices upon the stone attars of the Druids Egypt was the center of a rich and refined civilization. Most of the development of Egypt was due to the Xile, which not only watered and fertilized the soil annually, but was and is one of the best natural highways in the world.

Old Saws and Sayings.

A few old sayings on the subject of food come to us rather as a surprise in our age of daintness and refinement, yet they have their raison d'etre not withstanding. Eel pies were once the great feature of breakfast served at the old Sluice House, near Finsburg park. The necessary quantity of fish was regularly diredged up from the stream which ran under the windows of the inn. The pies are still to be had, but the eels are procured from a nearby fish market.

Simpson's, in the Strand, is noted for its fish dinners. This place was once immensely popular, and even today there is a certain following who swear by its repasts. For a certain sum the guest eats as much of a variety of fish as be cares to.

Another inn boasts of a special dish in the shape of Southdown mutton. This is wheeled up to the table in order that each individual may select the particular cut to which he is partial. The mutton is kept warm by means of water heated by a lamp.

The Making of Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, ambassadors, patlisadoes, communication, circumvallation, battallons," as newfangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. Today nearly all these are the most orthodox English. In his time "mob" seems commonly to have been written "mobb," and "phizz" also had the doubled consonant. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest, as the owl fattened her mice after she had bit off their legs to prevent them from running away."

THE WORD "GOWN."

It First Came Into Use to the Four-teenth Century.

Female costume in the tenth century was classical in its simplicity. The women wore lang, loose, flowing skirts reaching to the feet and a draped "cote," or upper garment, Chaucer, who died in 1000, when Henry IV, was king, frequently uses the word cote. In the "Canterbury Tales" he depicts the sergeant-at-haw as wearing a "medley cote," which no doubt means a coat of many colors, while the miller he describes as wearing "a whyte cote." It was in the fourtcenth century that the word "gown" first came into use. An anonymous author in no mild words finds fault with the fashlon of his days. He writes that "the commons were beaotted in excess of ap-ton?"

"One of those fellows who depend apon their whiskers to lend them distinction."—Chicago Record-Herald.

We had met to talk over preparations for the coming season, which was soon to begin. Having finished that subject, we dropped, as I have said, into general chat on aquatic sul said, into general chat on aquatic subjects and from this into stories of feats that had been performed at contests

"What year was that?" I inquired.
"It's not a pleasant subject to talk about; we lost the race."
"To what did you attribute the failure?" asked one of our number. "There is always a reason for every beating a crew gets. One time it is the stroke, another the training, another the cockswain."
"I was the cause of the failure on that occasion," replied the stranger.

The stranger continued: "We had been beaten by our great rival in two successive seasons, and for this regatta had made every preparation, taken every precaution to secure a triumph. We had the best coach the country afforded, a new boat made on the most approved model, our made on the most approved model, our ade on the most approved model, our practice constant. The effect of his story was, to say the least, depressing, and we were glad to get rid of him. As the season advanced we forgot all about Mr. Stroke and his story. I was much interested in the coming regatta and the preparations for it, though I was not a member of the miversity erew. Our college had been doing bad work at boating for a long period. In ten years I think we had beaten our principal adversary but twice. This year we hoped for and expected better things. All went well till the day of the race, when one of the crew fell suddenly ill and could not row. Unfortunately all the available material had been utilized. Hair Monstrosities.

French theater managers in the eighteenth century had worse evils than picture hats to contend against. Marie Antoinette, who was short even according to French standards, set the fashion of high colifures, and ultrafashionable women prided themselves on measuring four feet from their chins to the tops of their heads. These structures took about is hours to erect, the hairdresser mounting a ladder in the process. Some colifures were almost as broad as they were were almost as broad as they were for the west and stripped in a huge pile to represent the waves of an angry sea and surmounted by a fully rigged ship. THE STATELY STORK.

His Immense Power on the Wing and His Lack of Voice.

In Holland the nests of storks are generally on the summit of a tail post, put up on purpose for them, on which is fixed an old cart wheel. Says an English writer: "A Dutch gentleman of my acquaintance has one such post in his grounds within sight of his library window, but he improves on the cart wheel by having an iron framework for the reception of the nest. The first year it was put up, toward the end of June, a soiltary young stork used to come daily and inspect Clyde Fitch's Joke.

"Clyde Fitch was an indefatigable worker," said an actor who has played in many of the Fitch comedies. "Whet he had a play on the stocks he would labor over it day and night, often scarcely pausing for his meals and getting very little sleep; consequently his health suffered. He would work until on the verge of a nervous break down, and then his physician would step in and force him to knock off.

"During one of these periods of enforced idleness he was iounging in the Players club one day when Harry B Smith, the prolific comic opera libret tist, strolled in.

"What are you doing now? asked Smith.

"I am in my doctor's hands,' replied Fitch. 'He tells me I'm in a bad way and has absolutely forbidden me to do not her and unwilling to leave the head until the unger mandible reports.

Unfortunately all the available material had been utilized. There were substitutes galore, but the man who had dropped out was one of the two most important men of the crew. To put any one in his place would be to surely lose the race.

A few minutes before the crews went out to the water I asked about the substitute and was told that a freshman was to row. I could not learn how or why he had been chosen, but, whshing to have a look at him, Iwent down on to the float. The men were getting into the boat. The substitute's face was familiar to me, but I could not tell where I had seen him. Then suddenly it rushed upon me that he was the man we had called Mr. Stroke.

Laugh and Grow Fat.

"Laugh and grow fat" is an old saying, and there is more than a little truth in it, asserts a doctor. "The convulsive movements which we call laughter exert a very real effect upon the bodily framework. They cause the arteries to dilate, so that they carry more blood to the tissues of the body and the heart to beat more rapidly, so that the flow of the blood through the vessels is hastened. In other words, "All Things Come."

THE CELEBRATION.

In size and variety of entertainments the Independence Day celebration in this city eclipsed anything of the kind that even the Oldest Inhabitant had any knowledge of, except perhaps the great 250th anniversary observance of Woburn's incorporation held in 1892 under the administration of Mayor Edward Everett Thomp for the grand event went rapidly and bravely on. Everybody became interested and plans on a big scale for the occasion were blocked out and duly announced. They were elaborate enough to suit the most patriotic inhabitants of this city, and in the execution of them there was not the least hitch or flaw from start to finish. The morning of the "Glorious Fourth" dawned auspiciously for the event; the weather was of the Fourth of July type—warm, cloudless, balmy—with just a "pinch of salt," as the cook says, from the briny ocean to season the atmosphere during the early hours of sunup. It was evident to everybody that Smith, the Boston Weather Regulator, was agreeable to helping carry out Woburn's great display of Patriotism on "The Day We Celebrate." Again the Journal is pleased to remark that wealth, manufactories and facilities for the same, schools, churches, societies, etc., and its illustrations are numerous and fine. The head officers of the P. A.—

Chairman Hatfield Discusses the Political Outlook

WORKING HARD FOR SUCCESS

s Confident That People Do Not Wish Democratic Victory-Evidence That Manufacturers Fear Democratic Congress

Chairman Charles E. Hatfield of the Republican state committee is doing very active work in organizing the state for the coming campaigs. He believes that hard work is the invariable secret of success. He is laboring to imbue the city and town committees of the state with his own energetic spirit and he believes that the Republican ticket is going to be successful next November. Mr. Hat-field has given an interview to a representative of this newspaper in which he expresses himself frankly as follows:

"I have made a pretty thorough tour of the state and find a much better situation than existed a few weeks ago. Republicans are awakening to the fact that a hard fight is ahead of the fact that a hard night is alread or us next fall and they are taking steps to get in condition for the campaign. "Throughout the state I believe city and town committees are in good con-dition and that they will leave nothing undone which might aid in ou canvass this fall. "The attempt to hold the tariff re-sponsible for the lucreased cost of liv-ing is a failure. There was nothing but politics back of the effort to conour pointes back of the color to convince the people that high prices were due to the tariff. To hold the Republican party responsible for that would be pure childishness, especially in view of the fact that the greatest increases have been in articles on which the tariff has been reduced or which are on the free list.

"Besides, the rise in prices is not a local matter. If it were due to the tariff it ought to be confined to the United States. As a matter of fact, there has been the same proportionate advance in prices throughout all Europe, in free-trade England as well as in the countries which have a moderately protective tariff.

Extravagant Mourning.

Pepys' diary has this on the mourning customs of the time: On Sept. 22, 1600, when there was mourning for King Charles' brother, the Puke of Gloucester, he "bought a pair of short black stockings to wear over a pair of slik ones for mourning." Next day "came one from my father's with a black cloth coat, made of my short cloak, to walk up and down in." The problem of mourning for men must have been greater than it is now in those days, when ordinary masculine costinue was less somber. On this occasion Pepys records seeing "the king in purple mourning for his brother." There is one mourning extravagance of the early eighteenth century which would scarcely commend itself—the soles of the shoes used to be blacked—St. James' Gazette.

POWDER AND GUNS.

Evidence That They Were Used Long Before the Christian Era.

the Great met with fire weapons in the Great met with fire weapons in Asia, and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderboits shot from the walls." Julius Africanus mentions shooting powder in the year 275. It was used in the slege of Constantinople in 608, by the Arabs in 690, at Thessatolica in 904, at the slege of Belgrade in 1073, by the Greeks in an avail battle in 1008, by the Arabs against the liberans in 1147 and at Thousander in 1218.

It appears to have been generally known throughout civilized Europe as early as 1300, and soon thereafter it made its way into England, where it was manufactured during the reign of Elizabeth, and we learn that a few arms were possessed by the English in 1310 and that they were used at the battle of Creey in 1346.—Cassier's Magazine.

The unsuspecting clerk sent the wine, with which the guests were so pleased that they asked where it came too. Sheridan, turning toward Challes, aid, "I am indebted to my friend here for all the wine you have tasted and am always proud to recommend him." It was not until the following morning that Challe realized the double meaning in Sheridan's words. The debt was canceled. debt was canceled.

It seems to me as though more of our citizens are going away on vacations this summer than ever before. It must be that money is plenty here. The valuation of this town, according to the Assessors' report is larger than either Woburn or Marlboro, and nearly as high as that of Newburyport.

The Twelve Jurymen.

A prisoner is tried by twelve of his fellow countrymen. This custom is a thousand years old, and we get it from the vikings. The vikings divided their country up into cantons, which wer subdivided into twelve portions, eac under a chieftain. When a malefacto was brought to justice it was usua for each chieftain to select a man from the district over which he ruled and compel him to try the prisoner, the verdict of these twelve men being de-clared by the judge to be final.

It Became Popular by the Patronage of Charles II.

Few men realize how much they are being influenced in their dress by King Charles II., and yet it is to that monarch we owe the adoption of the waist-coat as a regular article of gentleman's dress, says London M. A. P. At least that is so if we are to accept the statement of Pepys, who in his diary under date of Oct. 16, 1096, states; "The king has declared his residual to the would never aiter," and "This day King Charles II. began to put on his vest, it is a very fine and handsome garment."

Prior to this date they were excep-vest, it is a very fine and handsome garment."

Prior to this date they were exceptional garments, and there is even some doubt whether they were originally worn by ladies or gentlemen, though there is good reason to believe they superseded the doublet, such as was worn by Raleigh, Essex and other notables of the Elizabethan age.

A neat waistcoat "wrought in silk and gold" is mentioned in "Patient Grissell." 1602, and there is a painting in distemper of a vest on the walls of Winchester cathedral, dated 1489, so

"Sens and Lands."

One evening as he was going to the palace to take his turn in keeping the night watch he let ten cash drop out of his tinder case into the stream and then bought fifty cash worth of torches to search for the lost coin. His friends laughed at him for spending so much in order to recover so little, and he replied, with a frown:

"Sirs, you are foolish and ignorant of economics. Had I not sought for these ten cash they would have been lost forever—sunk in the bottom of the Namerigawa. The fifty cash which I have expended on torches will remain

Wedding Ring Mottoes.

When postes or mottoes inscribed inside wedding rings were first introduced does not seem to be known. but from the sixteenth century until the middle of the eighteenth it was customary to have them engraved on rings. These mottoes seldom consisted of more than two lines of a verse, often of only one, but there are a few instances known where three lines were used. Some of these poster are very qualit and curious, and a lines were used. Some of these poster are very quaint and curious, and a few reach a high standard of poetle beauty. The South Kensington museum has a good collection of posyrings, and among them are the following inscriptions: "United hearts death only parts;" "Let us share in low and care." The Oragon Fly.

The oldest extant poem about a dragon fly is said to have been composed 1,440 years ago by the Emperor Yuria ku of Japan. One day, while this emperor was hunting, say the ancient records, a gadfly came and bit his arm. Therewith a dragon fly pounced upon the gadfly and devoured it. Then the emperor commanded his ministers to make an ode in praise of the dragon fly. But as they hesitated how to begin he himself composed a poem in praise of the insect, ending with the words:

Even a creeping insect
Walts upon the great Lord.
Thy form it will bear,
O Yamato, land of the dragon fly! And in honor of the dragon fly the place of the incident was called Akitsuno, or the moor of the dragon fly.—

A Stubborn Husband.
A most interesting phenomenon is the stubborn husband. He is not a the stubborn husband. He is not a bad man. He is contrary, and he has to be managed. He is usually married to a clever little woman, who is constantly devising schemes to accomplish the things which make their joint lives a success.

He has no suspicion of this. If he had he would be so mad he could undoubtedly eat her. So all through life she goes on swinging a turnip ahead of his nose to make him go the same as though he were a balky mule. She is a cheery little body, and she grows plump with every year, and she does her smiling behind the door or she chuckles in her sieeve when he is not by. The stubborn husband is as interesting as a bug—London Standard.

A man should stand erect, not be kept erect by others.—Marcus Aurelius.

COUNTING BY TENS.

COUNTING BY TENS.

And a Suggestion as to Why We Buy Things by the Dezen.

Did it ever occur to you as strange that while we count by tens we buy so many articles by the dozen? If we ask the price of apples, oranges, oysters, eggs, collars, handkerchiefs and many other things we will be told so many cents or dollars a dozen or if large quantities are wanted so much a gross, which means a dozen dozen.

How do you suppose this has come about? It was this way: Nearly all savage people count by their fingers—that is, if they want to tell you they have seen two wild beasts they will hold up two fingers, and if ten they will hold up two fingers, and if the they will hold up two fingers, and if the they will hold up two fingers, and if twenty both hands twice, and so on. Bables also learn to count by their fingers and toes, and to many people it seems as if that were the only possible way.

It is, however, rather a clumsy way, as you find out when you try to divide ten. Say, for example, you have ten apples. You can only make an equal division among two or five persons, while if you have twelve you can give an equal number to two, three, four or six. We find the same luconven lence in dividing a dollar and often have to pay 13 cents for what should properly coat 12½ cents.

If we had been born with two, four six or eight fingers or toes, like some animals, it is possible that we should have counted differently, but it does not now seem likely there will ever be any change in the ten or decimal system, as it is called, especially since.

SPOILED THE PLOT.

A Display of Juvenile Affection That Saved the Mongrel.

About three weeks ago there strolled into a Ridley Park house a dirty, disreputable looking dog. He was of no particular breed, but a general mixture of all there are. Out of the kindness of her heart the cook gave him a few bites to eat, and from that time ou, try as they would, the family could few bites to eat, and from that time on, try as they would, the family could not get rid of the canine. The small children took a great fancy to the dog and named him Bluie. Their father and mother grew tired of seeing Bluie around and secretly plotted to get him out of the way. They feared to kidnap him openly by day, for there would surely follow much protest and distress on the part of the children. Accordingly plans were made for losing Bluie some place far from Ridley Park by night. The evening that the plot was to be carried out, just after supper, father, night. The evening that the plot was to be carried out, just after supper, father, mother and a five-year-old boy were in the parlor. The little fellow was fondling the dog as if he were his best friend in the world. Finally he selzed the dog farmly under the shoulders and, looking straight into his eyes, lisped out, "Bwoole, do you wore me?" and then after a moment with joy in his voice. "Bwoole woves me and the world is mine." After that touching display neither father nor mother had the heart to deprive the little fellow of "Bwoole's" company, and the little inongrei dog seems sure of a comfortable home for life.—Philadelphia Record.

How Japa Play Ken.
In its most widely practiced form the basis of the Japanese game of ken is that the fully outsretched hand signifies paper, the fully closed hand a stone, and two fingers alone extended, the rest being closed, scissors. Each of the players, counting one, two, three, throws out his hand at the moment of pronouncing three, and the one whose manual symbol is superior to that of the others, according to the one whose manual symbol is superior to that of the others, according to the theory of the game, whise the trial. Superiority is determined on the hypothesis that whereas scissors cannot cut a stone they can cut paper and whereas paper is cut by scissors it can wran un a stone-consequently sciswrap up a stone-consequently scis sors are inferior to stone, but conquer paper; stone is inferior to paper, but conquers scissors, and paper is inferior to scissors, but conquers stone. There are innumerable varieties of the game.

The Artist and the Critic.

Sidney Cooper, the English artist, happening one day to visit the Royal academy, where some of his works were on exhibition, while a couple of critics were examining the pictures strolled up to where they were standing. At that moment the younger of the two critics exclaimed, "Any machine could turn out sheep like that!" A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari. a tall, slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdall's chilef crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Joward requires little cultivation except weeding, which the Abdall does by hand, and when riphe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 125 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.88. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.—Consular and Trade Reports. Trade Reports.

By EDITH V. ROSS

My love for Edward Lane began when we were both so young that neither of us could remember a time when it did not exist. His father's place was but a short distance from ours, Indeed, the rear line marked the limits of both places. On one side of this line was the playground of the several children, boys and girls, including Edward and myself, who lived in the neighborhood. I can remember as far back as when I was seven years old and Edward nine that in playing keep house he and I always played the part of husband and wife. There was a swing on this playground, and Edward's father put up articles for a boys' gymnasium. A little house four or five feet high was built for us girls and furnished with toy furniture. At times we would leave our dolls there all night, first putting them to bed.

When I grew taller I could not understand how I could have stood upright in that little house. And what seemed more remarkable to me was that Edward could have done so, for he was always a large child. And I remember that when he had been away to school for a long while and came back he was taller than the house.

By this time we were growing out My love for Edward Lane began house.

By this time we were growing out of childhood into that intermediate period when, though boys and girls may feel love, they are not likely to express it. It is a period of transition from child love to real love. The boy mind is taken up with athletic sports, while the girl hides her secret almost from herself. Indeed, so nebulous is this period that in my own case it is difficult for me to recall my exact feelings. I remember them faintly and as existing at intervals. They were rather a small portion of my girl's existence than the whole of it.

When I was sixteen I was awakened

Istence than the whole of it.

When I was sixteen I was awakened to the true condition by the marked preference displayed by another girl for my Edward. From that time my love became the principal instead of a minor part in my life. I failed to conceal my jealousy from him, and this brought out his own consciousness of what was between us. There was no brought out his own consciousness of what was between us. There was no formal declaration, no conventional giving of the hand, not even the lovers' kiss. He merely said something about the other girl, I know not what, but it assured me there was no change in our position since the days when we played husband and wife at keeping house—no change in the position, but a great change in the condition, It had then been like a winter bud, but it was now swollen under a spring sun, ready to put forth leaves.

looking the playground where we had pretended to be husband and wife. The faint dream of childhood had been developed to a realization of almost perfect happiness. If there could be a perfection on earth, these five years of my life, from twenty to twenty-five, were such a condition. Two children were born to us, a boy and a girl. were such a condition. Two children were born to us, a boy and a girl. What seemed strange to me was that, What seemed strange to me was that though I gave them a boundless love that which I bore their father, instead of being diminished, was increased. Truly love must be the space, induite, and the strain of the being diminished, was increased. Truly love must be the space, induite, and the strain of the least three the symmetry of a legislation of a happiness. Suddenly like earne a check. Our youngest child sickened and died. I have described with some minuteness whar I of a flower. I have no heart to give more than a brief mention of its blighting. Within a few months after the first death a second occurred, and first death as a second occurred, and the strain a second occurred, and the strain of the space of the same occurred to the space occurred t

I may be weaker than some women or I may be stronger. Possibly I may have less depth of feeling, though that I will not a imit. I saw only in nursing my grief a dreadful life before me. I mean judgment is finite, and it recognized the principle that no two absorbing ideas can occupy the brais.

Weak Throat—Weak Lungs

Cold after cold; cough after cough! Troubled with this taking-cold habit? Better break it up. We have great confidence in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for this work. No medicine like it for weak throats and weak lungs. Ask your doctor for his opinion. He knows all about it. His approval is valuable. Follow his advice at all times. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Always keep a good laxative in the house. Take a dose when your cold first comes on. What is the best laxative for this? Ayer's Pills. Ask your doctor his opinion. Let him decide at one time. I did all that I could to interest myself in what was about me. True, I did not at first succeed, and when I did only partially so. I dreaded the word forget, and yet I realized that to avoid suffering I must temporarily forget. I forced myself to feel that after a time I would be reunited with my loved ones and that meanwhile I must, except occasionally, put them out of my mind.

Then he was called to America on the matter of some property that needed his attention. It was agreed between us that he should leave me and our children in Lucerne, where we were then living. He expected to be absent not more than two months, but soon after his arrival in America he was induced to write for a publisher a work necessitating his presence in America. He suggested my coming home with the children, but left me to consult my own feelings in the matter.

I had never intended to return to the "Collect 'em, sir?" "Yes,' I said, 'how do ye and get them to market?" "We dor't kill 'em. "We dor't kill 'em. "That seemed to me a proposition—to beat a flow in the series of the se matter.

I had never intended to return to the United States, dreading lest it would reawarken me to my lost world. But with a husband and children that world had receded further and further from me till the consciousness of it had grown very dim. I wrote my husband that I would go back to the western hemisphere and remain there. I was tired of moving about from one place to another and the children were coming to that age when they should coming to that age when they should have steady instruction at school. Our

It had then been like a winter bud, but it was now swollen under a spring sun, ready to put forth leaves.

I sometimes wished that I could have experienced the proposal that other girls seemed to regard the next most important moment in their lives to their marriage. Edward and I had no occasion for a proposal. Our love was rather, as I have said, an unfolding of a bud than the birth of a butterfly. The only abrupt part of it was when he gave me the first kiss. I have always treasured that in lieu of a proposal.

When we were married great changes had occurred. I was left alone in the world. So it was arranged that we should occupy my house. Our living from was on the second floor, overlooking the playground where we had pretended to be husband and wife for us. If was very dark when we reached our home and I saw nothing of it till I stood in the hall. Then I caught at a banister to prevent my failing.

I was in the house I had left more boys I preferred to bring up in America.

I therefore suggested to my husband that he buy a place in which we might settle. He replied that he agreed with the world had bound to alwow was rathe would carry out my suggestions. Later he wrote me that he buy a place in which we might settle. He replied that he agreed might settle. He replied that he agreed might settle. He replied that he agreed might settle. I was in the house I had left more than ten years before with a blighted heart.

"My dear!" exclaimed my husband, starting toward me.

But in a twinking I had recovered myself. And what had enabled me to do so? The sudden appearance of an object. Ah, those objects that come to sel. One of the anecdotes in Joseph L King's "History of the San Francisco Stock Exchange Board" is as follows:
While stocks were quite low during a spell in 1873 a discovery of ore was made in Ophir, the stock advancing in price. It was the policy of those in control of a Comstock mine to keep secret any improvement until they could secure for themselves a good quantity of the stock.

ARAB MANNERS.

Life in the Tents of the Roving and Eloquent Bedouins.

"By living with the Arabs, doing as they did and noving with them in their migrations," writes Douglas Carruthers in the Geographical Journal, "I obtained an insight into their mode of life and customs. Things move slowly in the east, and I spent fourteen days in buying three camels. But the time was not wasted. I studied Arab manners, learned more or less how to eat with my hands, how to wear the Arab costume with some comfort, how to drink coffee a la Arab, and, most difficult of all, how to sit still all day long doing nothing. I found this last most tryling, more especially because it was cold. A Bedouin tent is a drafty place at the best, but in midwinter it is almost unbearable. On two occasions there was saned to feed out of a huge round dish, ten of us at a time. The fare was camels' milk and bread in the morning, and in the evening we generally had meat and rice cooked with an enormous amount of fat. During the day we appeased our hunger by sipping strong black coffee. At night there was always a large group of men in the tent of the shelk, and the talk was carried on far into the night.

"Eloquence is a highly prized talent night.

"Eloquence is a highly prized talent among the Bedouins, and not only would they recount their stories in the most beautiful manner, but on occasion, to the time of a single stringed violin, they would sing ex-tempore songs for hours on end."

KEEPING HIS RECORDS.

Unusual Business Methods of a Mer

Unusual Business Methods of a Merchant in Western Canada.

In the Bookkeeper is recorded a case which clearly coxes under the head of "unusual business methods." In a thickly settled prurie Jistrict in western Canada, not far from Moose Jaw. a few Canadians had opened up a coal mine, the product of which they sold to the surrounding farmers. Settlers would come in wagons and sleighs and load their own winter's fuel, which cost them from $1 to $2 a ton, according to the run. It was early winter when I first made the acquaintance of this mine and its remarkable "superintendent," and my first reception from this individual was a fierce yell on his part, with the frantic brandishing of a long stick and the words: "What the devil are you doing? Can't you see? Are you stone blind?"

I was literally walking through his books! Since morning—and this was at 3 o'clock in the afternoon—be had been keeping a record of outgoing sleighs and wagons of coal in the snow. About twenty farmers were drawing that day. With his stick he had write. sleighs and wagons of coal in the snow. About twenty farmers were drawing that day. With his stick he had written the initials of each in a clean spot in the snow and with that same stick had registered the number of tons they had taken away. I had spoiled one-half of his "books," and it was an hour before he became at all affable I was still more astonished when I entered the "superintendents" little board office. The walls were black with pencil marks, figures and names. A fire would have burned down his "book" of two years past.

A Politician's Theory.

"Why did Diogenes adopt those spectacular methods in his effort to find an honest man?"

"Ob," answered Senator Sorghum, "I suppose he had a hard job that paid neither salary nor perquisites that he wanted to work off on somebody."—Washington Star.

General Campaign Opened Against Vahey-With Vahey Named Cam palgn Fund Might Be Small-Nomination of Foss Would Mean Big

There is just as much uncertainty today regarding the Democratic nomi-spipearing not to want the nomination any longer, for he has finally declared himself a candidate. This declaration does not remove any of the uncertainty as to who will be the nominee of the Democratic party, but it makes the situation less difficult to understand than it has been heretofore. The position of Mr. Foss for the three or four weeks before he announced himself as a candidate was confusing to those who were not in the secret. He at first declared that he would not run against Mr. Vahey under any circumstances. Notwithstanding this, all the big guns of the Democratic state committee and practically all the prominent politicians in betterials. These materials run alpha betterials run alpha betterials all the prominent politicians in Boston shouted for him. When anyone mentioned the fact that Mr. Vahey had run twice and proved a good candidate, the Democratic leaders declared that while this might be so, he clared that while this might be so that the clared that while this might be so, he clared that while this might be so, he clared that while this might be so that the clared that ould not be elected. They claimed that Mr. Foss might be more success that Mr. Foss might be more successful and said they believed he probably would be. To those who were merely on the outside, Mr. Foss seemed, like Caesar, to be pushing aside a kingly crown. Those who were on the inside, however, said he expected it to be forced upon him and that in that sense he would not run that in that sense he would not run against "jim" Vahey. It is probable that Mr. Foss hoped to assume the at-titude of a man forced to accept a nomination against his will, and therefore forced against his will to oush Mr. Vahey to the wall.

push Mr. Vahey to the wall.

Don't Want Him Sidedracked
There is a good deal of feeling in the Democratic party against the sidetracking of Mr. Vahey. Undoubtedly a large percent of the rank and file of the party in the state would like to see him renominated. Some of them say that of the three Democratic governors of Massachusetts since the Civil war, not counting Benjamin F.
Butler, one was a good enough governor, but that the other two were of absolutely no use to the Democratic absolutely no use to the Democrat party. The good man is reckoned as party. The good man is reckoned as William E. Russell. The two named as men who did nothing for the Democracy were William Gaston and William L. Douglas. There are a good many Democrats who would not like to see another such sit in the gubernatorial chair on Beacon hill. They think that Mr. Vahey would not be that kind of a governor, and they are afraid that Mr. Foss probably would that the leading Democrats right around Boston have determined to minate Mr. Foss and the plans fo nominate Mr. Foss and the plans for doing this are apparently complete. With a large amount of money at the disposal of the machine, this should not be an impossible task. To be ure. Mr. Vahey has a very large fol-Mr. Vahey out of the running, but the Mr. Vaney out of the running, out the Democratic leaders believe that all this feeling will subside after the campaign has begun and enthusiasm manifests itself. As a matter of fact, the leaders count on being able to hold the party in line through appeals to the party in line through appeals to party loyalty and regularity. They count on the strength of the party feeling which impels a man to "vote the ticket" whether he likes its makeup or not.

It is declared that men have been sent around the state attempting to convert the Vahay men to Mr. Foss, and that in some sections an almost complete reversal of Democratic opinion so far as leaders are concerned has been accomplished. The whole scheme is evidently being worked beneath the

He will speak under the auspices of The Republican Club of Massachusetts.

Speaker Joseph Walker of the Massachusetts house of representative will again be a candidate for speaker. He has served two terms in that capation to his re-election. Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastri Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tisasked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric Julces have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be digested and possibly, too, adjacent digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being allive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conclainly was proved instruance for exceivable was proved inservable of exligested and possibly, too, adjacen ceivable was proved incapable of ex ceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually ent itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hodges in New York Tribune.

It costs money to run this sort of a campaign and the friends of Mr. Vahey are already complaining that the tree appears to be a lot of it in circulation for this purpose.

Cuba is the name by which the island was originally known to the Lucayan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it. One of its villages or cities was called by them Cubanacan, and it is reported that from the similarity of sounds Columbus, still supposing himself to be on the coast of Asia, imagined that this must be a city of Kubiai Khan, the Tartar sovereign celebrated by Marco Polo. The survival of the original name for Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many times since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called in his memory Fernandina. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria, in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.

I'm not such a fool but that I can see that Kate always turns the con-versation on to subjects she knows something about, and when Rosco gets on to a subject of which she is ignorant she keeps mum. It occurred to me to listen when they were talking, notice the subjects she avoids, make a list of them and study them. And so I did. I form out that history doesn't interest her. Nor does science. She smatters over social questions, professes herself theoretically a Socialist and all that.

During the spring months I devoted myself to study. All the members of this play, as I call it, are friends—at least the families are—and we meet every season at the summer cottage of one or the other for a house party. This year we are at our country home. gets on to a subject of which she is

I didn't let on what I knew. I just laid low for Kate when she got on her high horse before Roscoe. I didn't have to wait long. The day after we all arrived we three were sitting on the porch. Form of Divorce in Old Rome.

In the earlier period of the Roman republic divorces were quite unknown and were rare right up to the time of the Sullan wars. In the old days the husband and wife who wished to separate appeared for the last time before the common hearth, a priest and priestess being present. As on the day of marriage, a cake of wheaten flour was presented to the husband and wife, but instead of sharing it between them they rejected it. Then, instead of prayers, they pronounced formulas of a strange, severe, spitcful character, by which the wife renounced the worship and gods of the husband. hicago Tribune.

The patient was exceedingly polite to both the medical gentlemen, shaking hands with them and bowing them out of the room in the most affable manner. Soon after this professional visit the same physician called again on the surgeon, requesting him to accompany him to see another patient. On their of way thither the surgeon observed, "I hope this patient will behave more liberally than the last did."

"Why?" said the M. D. "Did he not give you a fee?"

The plainly that He must suffer, be killed by the Jewish rulers and by the killed by the Jewish rulers and be killed by the Jewish r that He must not talk so, must not think of being so ill treated, "Be it far from Thee, Lord; this shall not be unto Thee" (verse 22), or, as in the margin, "Pity Thyself, Lord." Thus is Peter blind to all the Scriptures concerning His sufferings and speaks as from the wicked one rather than from from the wicked one rather than from the Spirit, as before. When filled with the Spirit of God no one had more to say about the sufferings of Christ and our suffering with Him than this same Peter. See his first epistle. Our Lord then added His oft repeated words concerning denying self, taking up the cross, following Him, losing one's life to order to say at [Matt. v. 37.39]. in order to save it (Matt. x. 37-39; Luke xiv. 26, 27, 33; John xii, 25).

Presence of Mind.

A visitor to an insune asylum was walking in the grounds when a man came up to him and entered into conversation. After walking about for some time, discussing topics suggested by the place, the two set out on a tour of inspection, the man, apparently an official, inviting the visitor to go over the asylum. At length they reached the foot of a flight of steps, up which the guide led the way, and at the top the visitor found himself out upon the roof, a height of more than a hundred feet from the ground. As they gazed below his companion startled him suddenly by proposing to see who could jump farthest toward the grounds; Not until then had it dawned upon the visitor that his guide was mad. Mercifully he was a man of ready wit, and his wit saved the madman's life. "Oh, anybody can jump down," said the visitor, "Let us go down and see who can jump to the top." The madman thought it a good idea, and, retracing their steps, the two began their jump from the earth instead of from the roof.

Saving Time or Time Tables. To-most people, especially when they are on the road, time is money, but time tables are not convertible cash. In the pages of "Through Savage Europe" Harry De Windt gives a curious and amusing experience on a Russian railway some years ago. The patience of the Russians is in marked contrast with the impatience of American travelers. All Russians have a rooted antipathy to fast railway travel, if one may judge from an incident which occurred some years ago when I was travelling across the Caucasus cash. In the pages of "Through Sav I was travelling across the Caucasu from Batoum to Baku. We had the rooms cool and destroying the flies.

There is something about the electric fans which flies dislike. Perhaps it is the strange humming noise which reminds them of some dire enemy. Perhaps it is the strong current of air which makes it difficult for a fly to navigate. Whatever it is, it has been proved that the common electric fan is one of the best fly discouragers in use today. A fan kept playing over piles of fruit, the soda fountain, the candy case or any other part of the store case or any other part of the store which is apt to lure the insects, will effectively drive them away. The comfort of sitting upon a piazze in the evening is, under ordinary conditions, greatly diminished, if not destroyed altogether, by the "pestiferous" mosquitoes. An electric fan placed in a convenient position and connecting with the lamp socket inside the house, will keep mosquitoes and bugs of all kinds away, thus affording an oppor-tunity for really cool comtort.

One of the significant things about it these occasions is the great public interest so evidently apparent.
One of the features of the Norfolk s and Congressional.

Keilher Feels Sure of Winning Congressman John A. Keilher in the Ninth district feels very sure that he will be able to secure a Democratic renomination. He has been looking over the field ever since the adjournment of congress and says the furthe he investigates the better he is satisfied he investigates the better he is satisfied that he will be successful in his at-tempt to be returned. There are sev-eral candidates in the field against him, among them being Councillor William F. Murray of Charlestown and Representative David B. Shaw and Representative David B. Shaw from the same locality. While Mayor Flizgerald is bitterly opposed to Kel-ther on account of the fact that the latter was a Storrow man in the last city campaign, it is not altogether clear which of the various candi-dates against Keliher he would like to stick with the man he supported last year remains to be seen,

The friends of Mr. Keliher claim that he is much stronger this year than he was two years ago, but at that time he had to fight the greater part of the big politicians in his district and still won out by a substantial material to the caucuses. They believe and still won out by a substantial ma-jority in the caucuses. They believe he will do even better this year and that he will go back to congress handily.

The district is Democratic by more

The district is Democratic by more than two to one, so that the regular candidate is almost certain to be elected, even if there are independent candidates in the field. The Republicans usually make a nomination, but in such a Democratic stronghold and with such a hopeless contest a number of Republicans usually take little inter-Republicans usually take little inter est in the fight. Mr. Keliher has generally received quite a number of Republican votes.

Those most convers-ant with the situation think it proba-ble that O'Connell will be renominat-ed, notwithstanding the fact that he ed, notwithstanding the fact that he is not as popular as he has been in the past. Former City Clerk J. Mitchell Galvin is an aspirant for the Republican nomination. He made the fight two years ago, but O'Connell won by four votes. It is possible that some other candidate may be in the field for the Republican nomination. For the the Republican nomination, for the district is considered debatable ground under favorable conditions.

Peters Wants a Renomination
The contest in the Eleventh district for the Democratic nomination is more minutes until 10.00 P. M., then every green was.

The Woburn Brass Band are to give the next concert on Manchester Field in the Park Commission series on July 28. It will be a good one.

To the Democratic nomination is more or less unchanged. Congressman Andrew J. Peters feels quite confident that he will be able to win the nomination notwithstanding that he has to man the Democratic machine, or at least a part of it which to be a least a part of it which to be a least a part of it which the least a part I mation notwithstanding that he has to ngnt the Democratic machine, or at least a part of it, which is backing his opponent, former Senator Dowd. If he is successful in securing the nomination he will be obliged to hustle to win an election. While he has for several years had guite a Republican vote, this year he is likely to lose a number of Democrats who have hitherto given him their support. The machine intends to defeat him at the caucuses, but if he manages to pull through it would not be surprising if he were cut at the polls.

There seems quite a strong probability that Police Commissioner O'Meara may secure the Republican nomination in this district.

W. Dudley Cotton is a candidate for the Republican nomination, but some of the party leaders seem to think that he should retire and allow Commissioner O'Meara to be nominated without a contest. It is understood that the latter will not make a fight for the nomination, but that he would be willing to accept it and make a contest if it were given him unanimously. The district is naturally Republican, but Congressman Peters has niways received quite a Republican vote.

FUNERAL COSTUMES.

Their Extravagance Curbed by Law at One Time in England. Sumptuary mourning laws were for-merly found necessary in England ter of funeral costume. At the end of the fifteenth century it was laid down the fifteenth century it was laid down that dukes, marquises and archbishops should be allowed sixteen yards of cloth for their gowns, "sloppes" (mourning cassocks) and mantles; earls fourteen, viscounts twelve, barons eight, knights six and all persons of inferior degree only two. Hoods were forbidden to all except those above the rank of esquire of the king's household. In the following century Margaret, ountess of Richmond, mother of Hen-ry VII., Issued an ordinance for the "reformation of apparel for great es-tates of women in tyme of mourn-ings." So it seems that men and wom-en have met in the extravagance of sorrow.

Even 200 years ago London tradesmen found that court mourning seriously affected their business. Addison relates that at a tavern be often met i man whom he took for an ardent and eccentric royalist. Every time this man looked through the Gazette he exclaimed, "Thank God," all the reigning families of Europe are well." Occasionally he would vary this formula by making reassuring remarks respecting the health of British royalists. After some time Addison discovered that this universal royalist was a colored silk merchant, who never made a bargain without inserting in the agreement, "All this will take place as long." ment, "All this will take place as long as no royal personage dies in the in-terval."-London Chronicle.

MENTAL INFLUENCES

The State of the Mind Has a Direct

Effect Upen the Body.

A good deal is said in these days about the effect of mind on matter in the way of the cure of disease, but less is heard about mental induences as a cause of bodily ills, yet it is an old truth that the state of mind has a direct effect on the body. The gloom and depression caused by worry and anxiety create a morbid condition of the physical system. It is impossible to feel well physically when the mind and spirits are downcast. The blood does not circulate properly, appetite falls, the head aches, and if these morbid conditions continue more deep scated aliments are likely to arise, and cancer may be one of them.

With many persons a fit of anger is followed by an attack of indigestion. Exclusively desired the said of the conditions to the conditions of them.

followed by an attack of indigestion. Excitement destroys the appetite, bad news creates nausea, fright causes faintness, and so on. Violent or depressing emotions always disturb the pressing emotions always disturb the equilibrium of body and mind alike. This being the case, it is inevitable that when these emotions often recur or become continuous serious physical results will follow. The obvious lesson is, then, that mental serenity tends to health—is, in fact, an essential element of health—and that instead of resorting to mind "cures" after the health is broken it is wise to preserve the serenity as a preventive and safe-

He says that while in Tokyo he saw a young man sitting in a theater box grasping the rail with his feet just as though they were hands, ever and anon using his right foot to scratch his left thigh. The fact that the Japanese usually sit on their heels at meals and in the house develops extreme suppleness and mobility in the feet and toes, and the prehensive function is still further encouraged by the fact that the Japaneses who adhere

He had a daughter, Pac-quita, born on his ranch. From the time she was able to walk she was out o' doors all the while, climbin' fences and trees, and when she was four was ridin' the propes to water.

I've seen her toss her handkerchief on the ground, ride by it at full speed and with the spur hooked to her saddle reach down and pick it up. At that time she used to wear her hair itowin' out like a comet's tail—same as little gals do—and it was topped by a som-Mexican, with lots o' gold braid. Her eyes were black and her complexion almost as dark as a quadroon's. She got that from her mother, who had

But as time wore on I saw Pacquita and Allston more and more together, while Serrano seemed to be dropped out o' the race. It was perfectly natural that a fine lookin' man with swell manners should supplent a boy who didn't show up for much except that he was a very good kind of a feller. After awhile I said somethin' against the Englishman just to see how she'd take it. She fired up, you bet. Then I told her I thought Jose Herrara was worth three if Edward Allston. Odd French English.
A correspondent has been studying English pronunciation in a French dictionary (Pierre Larousee, 1890) and picks out a few examples to show how much effort is necessary for a French man to acquire a true articulation of English. They are all taken from a surprisingly long list of English phrases current in France. "Broken down" (as applied to a race horse) is "bro-k'n-daoun." "Dead heat" is rendered as "did-hith," which is ingenious, but hardly correct. "Al-laif" is not a bad attempt for "high life," although the aspirate is missing. "Self government," and the word "shocking" is quite applicable when rendered "chok-inn-que." The opening words of Hamlet's famous soilloquy have a decidedly foreign look, "Tou bi or nott tou bi, that is thi kouess-tcheunn."—Manchester Guardian.

Difference Between a Sanitarium and a Sanatorium.

The words "sanitarium" and "sanatorium" are popularly understood to have the same meaning and are generally used interchangeably when designating or describing places of refuge for sick people, but there is, in fact, quite a distinction between the meaning of the two words. In answer to a correspondent on this subject the Literary Digest says:

"The distinction between these words lies in the fact that they are derived from two different Latin roots. "Sanatorium" is derived from the late Latin sanatorius, meaning health giving. The Text of the Lesson, Matt. xvii, 1.8, 1420—Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Matt. xvii, 5—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have but one lesson in this great thapter which tells us of the transfiguration, the conflict and victory following. His death and resurrection again foretoid and the little fish which brought the tribute money. The transfiguration, like the lesson of last week is recorded by Matthew, Mark and Luke and is in some respects the most remarkable event in the humiliation of our Lord. The glory which here shines forth for a little moment was always in Him, but, like the glory over the mercy seat between the mercy seat betwee again foretoid and the little fish which brought the tribute money. The transfiguration, like the lesson of last week is recorded by Matthew. Mark and Luke and is in some respects the most remarkable event in the humiliation of our Lord. The glory which here shines forth for a little moment was always in Him, but, like the glory over the mercy seat between the cherubim in the holy of holies, was concealed by the vell which was typical of His body and which was rent in twain when He died on the cross (Heb. x, 20; Matt. xxvii, 50, 51). As He spoke of His sufferings in last week's lesson, He said that some of those present would see the glory of His kingdom before they died. I think I am safe in saying that while both in the Old and New Testa ments the glory is sometimes spoken of without mentioning the sufferings without the glory to encourage us in the suffering lines. This word about seeing the the glory to encourage us in the suffer ings. This word about seeing the kingdom before they died has been un

Yet a majority of one in parliament, which may logically depend on a majority of one in the country, has worked some of the most momentous results possible. The classical example is the act of union of 1799, certainly among the largest, most important and most remarkable changes ever accomplished by a legislative body. voted for it and 105 against. Then a majority of one carried the great reform bill in 1832.

Majorities only a little bigger have again and again been responsible for farreaching consequences. A majority of five threw out the Melbourne government in 1839. By the same figure Lord John Russell's government was defeated in 1866. Gladstone went out of office in 1873 because he lacked three votes, and the public education act, one of the most important ever passed, was placed on the statute book by a majority of two.—London Chemnels

The Ingrahams were entertaining two friends at dinner. After Mr. Ingraham had helped them to roast beef he happened to glance at the other end of the table, where his wife sat, and observed, to his horror, that the sugar bowl was the old one, with both handles broken off, that usually graced the dining table on wash days.

In vain he endeavored by mysterious nods and winks to direct Mrs. Ingraham's attention to it. She either did not see or would not see the mutilated piece of queensware, and his patience gave way at last.

"Cornella," he said, with some sharpness, "do you think we ought to use a sugar bowl when we have company without ears on?"—Youth's Companion.

occasions like a dog preparing to bite.

"My quarrel is with Harry Blake," he snarled. "It is none of your affair."

"Well, Wickliffe," Blake cried good naturedly, "if you will quarrel, I won't. I'll say no more."

Evidently Wickliffe was bent on trouble, for he muttered something which brought a cry of "Shame!" from every one in the room. Blake's face became deadly pale. "Wickliffe," he said steadly, "I didn't hear what you said, but I dare you to repeat it. If you do and there's one improper word in it, this hour will be the bitterest of your life."

your life."
Once more the offensive words were fung at him, and in an instant Blake had seized Wickliffe and thrown him across the room. For a moment he lay stunned, but presently, his face dark with hatred, he rose and, shaking his fast at Blake, exclaimed:
"You may take your measure for a coffin. You will need one."
"Not before you," was Blake's reply. Shortly after the quarrel Wickliffe left the Blue Horse for his home. Blake, whose road lay in the same direction, followed soon. Ten minutes later two more of the loiterers, also going over the highway taken by Wickliffe and Blake, started on their homeward way.

Wickliffe and Blake, started on their homeward way.

The last (yo travelers had ridden several miles, talking carnestly of the stirring events which then engaged men's minds, when a loud cry was heard at a little distance. In a moment

"Can Blake be settling scores with Wickliffe?" exclaimed Grayson, one of Wicklife?" exclaimed Grayson, one of the two riders.

In a moment they had galloped around a copse of trees at a bend in the road. Within twenty yards of them, on his back in the dust, lay Wickliffe dead. Bending over him stood Blake, grasping a knife driven to the haft in his bosom.

"Taken red handed." Grayson cried, while Walton, his companion, himself a magistrate, sprang from his horse, exclaiming, "Blake, I charge you with murder."

"Why, I didn't kill him," Blake said earnestly. "You are mad. I found Wickliffe lying dead and was about to pull this knife from the wound when pull this knife from the wound when you came up."

Grayson shook his head. "I wish I could believe you, Harry," he said, "but as I hope to be saved I saw you stab him. I did."
It would be hard to imagine a situation more likely to convince a jury of the prisoner's guilt. Conan Doyle in his wildest fancies in deduction never presented more damning evidence to Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson—the quarrel in the Blue Horse tavern, the epithet resented, the fight, the counter-threat of death, the departure of both while their temper yet was warm and then the terrible tableau on the highway.

What might's a man except even your way.

What might a man expect even now with the thousand loopholes that the law provides for escape? There could be only one conclusion now, as then, and that conclusion the jury reached without leaving the courtroom. Blake's protestations were vain. He died on the scaffold declaring his innocence.

Three months after the execution the judge who presided at the trial was summoned to Albany to see a prisoner under sentence of death. Grayson, whose testimony chiefly had convicted Blake, also was summoned. Much in wonder, they entered the cell together.

"I did."
"And you," turning to Grayson,
"swore you saw him stab Wickling.
On your testimony he was hung."
"I saw Blake stab him." Grayson

"I saw Blake stab him." Grayson said.
"You did not." the prisoner sneered, "for I killed Wickliffe. I sprang into the wood at Blake's approach. His story was true."
The confession was so clear and full that it left no doubt in the judge's mind that a fearful wrong had been done Blake. As for Grayson, the chief witness, he committed suicide. The records contain many instances of the law's mistakes, but few so pathetic as the case of Harry Blake.—Kansas City Star.

To Be Noble.

Most of our unhappiness comes about because there is in us a scrap of the infinite that is not satisfied with finite things. There is a longing in the human heart to unfold into a better life. To do and to be noble is the deepest desire of every heart. — Dr. Henry van Dyke.

EVADING THE LAW.

EVADING THE LAW.

The Pictures of Flying Birds in a Mehammedan Mesque.

According to one of the tenets of the Mohammedan religion, it is a sin to make a picture of any living thing. The elaborate decorations of the palaces and mosques of the east are almost exclusively made up of ingeniously interlaced geometric designs, arabesques or flowers, intermixed with sentences of the Koran.

There is a belief among Mussulmans that at the day of judgment Aliah will demand that the artist who has made the image of a living thing shall endow that image with life and that, failing to do this, the artist will be sent to perdition for his sin.

A gentleman who visited a mosque in Algiers found that the tiles with which the building is decorated, which are very old and very beautiful, are adorned with flights of birds. He expressed surprise at this and asked if the command against such representation were a modern edict.

"Oh, no," answered the pious Algerian to whom he addressed the question. "These are not pictures of living birds."

"But they are painted as if flying across the tiles," the other said in some astonishment.

"Yes," the Mussulman replied, "but do you not see that about the neck of each there is a fine black line? That is to show that the artist painted only dead birds, and the command of the Koran is not violated."

CASTE IN THE ARMY.

Civilians Find It Difficult to Under-stand Military Disciplins.

One thing not commonly understood among civilians is the completeness of among civilians is the completeness of the barrier which divides army officers from the soldiers, or, as they are more generally called, the "men." It is always vastly amusing to those familiar with the service to observe the errors in this respect frequently made by the novelist and the playwright. Personal qualifications have nothing whatever to do with the matter. A soldier may be a gentleman who has enlisted with the purpose of obtaining a commission, yet there can be between him and his officers no social intercourse of any sort, and severe penalties would be inflicted upon the officer who would attempt to disregard the rule.

It might seem that this enforcemen It might seem that this enforcement of a caste sense would result in much hard feeling on the side of the men. Such, however, is not actually the case. It is taken for granted and recognized as conducive to "good order and military discipline." It is a military regulation like any other and implies no disgrace. Directly a soldier's enlistment is out or directly he rises from the ranks the prohibition is removed.—Delineator.

Deathwatch Electes.

Their Tapping Stands For Courtship and Not For Warning.

Much mental anguish could have been saved to past generations and some not so very far past if people had known that the mysterious tapping of the "deathwatch" stood for courtship and not death. A writer in the Keientific American explains that the various species of the beetle anobium and their bigger relatives of the genus kestobium not only attack furniture, but so completely riddle the whole woodwork of oki houses by their borings as to render the structures unsafe. Indeed, a beam that has been tenanted by these insects for a number of years is little better than an outer shell containing a mass of wood death. The restobium is the common deathwatch, while the anobium also is in the habit of making a tapping sound.

The nocturnal tappings of these insects for a house of the period by these insects for a number of years is little better than an outer shell containing a mass of wood death. The xestobium is the common deathwatch, while the anobium also is in the habit of making a tapping sound.

The nocturnal tappings of these insects for a mysterious sound is scarcely surpristing when it is remembered that only in recent years have naturalists discovered its true cause.

The little beed has been found in some secluded spot, jerking its hard head at regular intervals upon the surface of the wood beneath it. So far as can be told, its rappings constitute a kind of courtship friuml. Obviously they have no connection with the latter end of mankind.

A RAIN OF FIRE.

The Great Meteoric Shower That Scared Folks in 1833. In Scharf's "Chronicles of Baltimore" there is a vivid description of the starry hallstorm, the flery meteoric show er, of 1833, and old files of newspapers are made luminous at that date with the impressions of editors and contribthe impressions of editors and contrib-utors. One writer said it was the grandest and most charming sight ever presented to the vision of man. Awak-ened from sleep, he sprang to the win-dow, thinking the house was on fire, but when he looked out he beheld stars, or fiery bodies, descending like "torrents." The shed "in the adjoin-ing yard to my own," he wrote, "was covered with stars, as I supposed, dur-ling the whole time." Professor Olm-stend of Yale college thought that the exhibition was the finest display of celestial fireworks that had been with nessed since the creation of the world. nessed since the creation of the world, although he, too, while knowing its character, was sufficiently imbued with the theological spirit of the time to believe that it was a solemn portent to believe that it was a solemn portent that carried a divine warning.

One editor whose comment upon this phenomenon was probably more quoted than any other he ever made said:

"We pronounce the raining fire which we saw on Wednesday morning an awful type, a forerunner, a meriful sign, of that great and dreadful day which the inhabitants of the earth will witness when the sixth seal will be opened. Many things occurring in the earth tend to convince us that we are now in the latter days."

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the feroclous monster, but the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear-life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again, he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

One day Major Charile Slaughter drove to my barn.

"I have quite a neat package of borsefiesh here,' said the major, 'and I have a sort of presentiment that he an travel a few lines when the wind is blowing in the right direction." 'His horse was a handsome roan, a regular peacock for style, with his head away up in the air so you'd need a stepladder to see if he had a star on his forehead. And the way he hit the road was a sin. 'Talk about guited about the time Franklin drew electricity from the clouds with his famous kite and key. In a humorous description of his experiments written by him in that year, Franklin said, "A turkey will be killed by the electric shock and roasted over the electric jack." Of course this article was supposed to be very funny at that time, but it is a very common practice to roast turkeys in electric ovens these days.

There can be no question as tarked as a stepindder to see if he had a star on his forehead. And the way he hit the road was a sin. Talk about gatted horses!" That roan handled his legs as though he had taken sparring lessons. Now, my weak point in the more business is that when I want a certain nag the worst way I can't concell the fact. I just can't sleep or eat my victuals until that horse is in my barn with a new halter on him. The major was wise to my weakness. "It's no use, Jake,' says the major. This hoss isn't on my secure."

The major was wise to my weakness.
"'It's no use, Jake, says the major.

"Well, of course I got the roan all right. The major was just bluffling.
And I gave him the bliggest trade you that he couldn't lower his head. He had to carry it about ten feet in the alipall the time, owing to some injury in his neck. He had to eat his daked rice off a shelf and drink from a garden nose, and a man needed an aeroplane to put a bridle on him.

"Did I raise a fuss with the major? What sort of skate do you take me for? Next time I met him I told him I liked the roan better than any horse I ever saw. 'He isn't always rooting in the ground like a pig,' said I, and if you had told me about his patent dirigible neck I'd have given you $10 more.' We were sports in those days. "One time the veterinary surgeon told me about a fine trotting horse in a town some distance away which had been deprived of its tail by a surgical operation. I went and looked at the horse. He was a perfect benuty and could trot like an avalanche. But he had just a stump of a tail, and the owner was ashamed to drive him, so I bought the critter for a song. I went to a lot of trouble having a tail made bought the critter for a song. I went to a lot of trouble having a tail made for him. "The major had poor eyes, and when I took him for a drive behind that black trotter he simply had to be tied down to the seat he was so excited. He said he'd always wanted a horse with a tail like that. He had my own weakness. He couldn't pretend indifference when he wanted a thing the worst way, and he wanted that horse worst way, and he wanted that horse worst way, and he wanted that horse so bad that his hair was falling out. After a great deal of deliberation I issued my ultimatum.

"I'll give you the horse, harness and buggy just as they stand, said I, for your sorrel three-year-olds and $50." Either of the sorrels was worth a herd of horses like the black.

"It's a trade, 'crede the major.

"Next morning the major came around to my barn all smiles. Ever since I was a child and quit playing with a rattle,' says he, 'I have wanted a horse with a detachable tall—a tall that a man could take off and use as hat a man could take off and use as hin whiskers at a masked ball. I just chin whiskers at a masken ball. I just called to pay you another 50 cents, so that when I meet you after this you can't say I took advantage of you in our trade yesterday."

Knocked Into a Cooked Hat. ed hat" is familiar to every one, bu ed hat" is familiar to every one, but perhaps its origin is not so generally known. Cocked hat was a variety of the game of bowls in which only three plus were used, set up at the angles of a triangle. When in bowling tenpins all were knocked down except the three at the corners the set was said to be "knocked into a cocked hat," whence the popular expression for depriving anything of its main body, character or purpose.

FOOTPRINTS OF GLACIERS.

They Present a Serious Problem Fo Future Generations.

Future Generations.
The site of New York city was once buried under hundreds, possibly thousands, of feet of ice. Ample proof of this is found in many places on Manhattan Island, the most tangible being the "footprints" of glaciers. Examine the surface of the rocks in Central or the surface of the rocks in Central or Riverside park and you will find nu-merous peculiar marks, and the peculiar marks. These peculiar marks, called by ge-ologists "strine," are the "footprints" of glaclers. They were produced by the grinding of pebbles upon the rock surfaces under the glaclers as the lat-ter moved to the sea. er moved to the sea.

How long ago it was that glaciers dowed over Manhattan Island is a matter of uncertainty. The period has been variously estimated at from 5,000 been variously estimated at from 5,000 to 50,000 years. The present trend of opinion is in favor of the smaller estimate. But, knowing as we do that the site of New York city was glaciated at a time remote or comparatively recent, the portentous question arises, Are the glaciers likely to descend on it again? No buman means could arrest their irresistible advance, Palatial homes, towering skyscrapers, Palatial homes, towering skyscrapers East river bridges, all the magnificent nonuments of human achievement, would be ground into atoms and swept Into the ocean.

Striae, or "footprints" of glaciers, are found from the highest northern and southern intitudes to the equator. Was the entire surface of the earth at one time covered with ice? Some geologists have taken that view, but the evidence does not warrant it.

That the earth has changed its arts from time to time and is still changing it is a fact well known to astronomers. It is conceivable, therefore, that in the course of ares, before the earth's crust ourse of ages, before the earth's crust issumed its present formation, the oles may once have been on the present equatorial line and the equatoria line where the poles now stand. By oscillation of the globe and consequent oscillation of the globe and consequent interchanging of polar and equatorial lines every part of the earth's surface must have been successively glaciated. Such a general lateral movement of the earth furnishes a reasonable ex-planation of the glacial "footprints" ev-erywhere found.

Men with low, squatting foreheads should not puil their hair down over their brows, and men whose foreheads are beginning to work back should invite their locks down. If your hair has quietly slipped down toward your ears on each side, leave it there. If you bring it up in strings and wisps it will merely look like climbing vines and will never really have the free and easy homelike appearance that ought to be the part of all natural hair.

Finishes Under Ground.

Most people of the north suppose that peanuts grow, like potatoes, on the roots of the vine. Others with equal confidence state that they hang from the branches like pea pods. Both are right, and both are wrong. The peanut ground in the shape of a flower growing at the end of a long tube. After the fall of blossoms this tube, or peduncle, elengates and bends downward, pushing itself inches into the ground. If for any reason it cannot do this it dies in a few hours. But if it succeeds in burying itself to its own satisfaction the ovary at the base of the peduncle slowly enlarges and forms the familiar pod, which is therefore dug out of the ground.

Scattered over the roots of the plant, however, are numerous warts or tubercles, in which, by the aid of a good microscope, can be seen myriads of minute organisms. These bacteria-like bodies, though they get their living from the plant, contribute materially to its supporting by collecting nitrogen from the air and holding it in storage, so to speak, supplying it to the plant as need requires. These wonderful little storehouses often contain, by analysis, a greater supply of this indespensable fertilizer than the surrounding soil.

The native country of the peanut has long been a matter of dispute, but the

The Sense of Humor.

A man has a sease or humor or he has not. If he has it by birthright he cannot lose it with the passing of years. The only change as life goes on in one who has this inborn sense is that different things appeal to it from those that excited amusement in youth, but in this it is like other mental faculties. As judgment melyouth, but in this it is fike other mental faculties. As judgment mellows and ripens, so the power of discovering those things that excite smiles becomes more discriminating. Humor is not a physical attribute to fade as the body loses its youthful elasticity, but purely mental. Men who possess it in goodly measure have been known to smile on their death-beds over the very comedy of life.—Indianapolis Star.

Martha Dale as she died that I would find homes for her children. The minister's wife will take care of the boy, but no one around here seems to want girls."

The farmer's wife looked exceeding by troubled, and the young man smiled consolingly.

"I am afraid that I cannot help you out," he replied, "The boy might have been made useful about my studio for a time; but, being a lonely orphan myself, I can only sympathize with the little girl."

"Perhaps," the woman mused hopefully, "Mrs. Gray might change and let you have the boy."

But Philip Dryden protested quickly. "I don't want either of them, he said. He was leaving the picture sque village that evening to spend the summer quietly at his old homestead, where the failful housekeeper alone remained to bid him welcome. In the fail he intended going abroad to pur sue his art studies. He made his way slowly up the brow of the hill, pausing to rest beneath a tree whose branches were laden with spring blossoms.

Presently a child's figure emerged from the shadows, a very tiny lad whose solemn dark eyes gazed wonderingly out from the brim of-his faded red cap.

"If you please," he said simply, "I could clean the paint brushes," the small voice added persuasively, "and I will be very good."

Philip jumped to his feet. "You poor ittel rascal," he exclaimed, "you can't go with me!"

Are Doctors Any Good?

Foolish question! Yet some people act as if a medicine could take the place of a doctor! The best medicine in the world cannot do this. Have a family doctor, consult him frequently, trust him fully. If we did not believe doctors endorsed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds, we would not offer it to you. Ask your doctor. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J.C. The People of Guatemala Like to Take Things Easy.

Just as Spain is the land of "manana," Guatemala has been called the land of "no hay." These words mean "there is none," and one hears them wherever one goes. If the people do not want to bother, declares N. O. Winter in "Guatemala and Her People of Today," that will be their invariable answer.

You might go up to a house where the yard was full of chickens, the woman engaged in making tortillas and fruit trees loaded with fruit in the yard and yet have a conversation about like the following:

"Have you any meat?"

"No hay."

"Have you a house?"

"No hay."

"If you please," he said simply, "I am ready to go with you."
The young man stared incredulously. "I could clean the paint brushes," the simall voice added persuasively, "and I will be very good."

Philip jumped to his feet. "You poor little rascal," he exclaimed, "you can't go with me!"
"But I am Jerry Dale," the child insisted. "You told Mrs. Westly you would take the boy."
"She ought not to have sent you here," the young man said angrily. He looked at his watch—just fifteen the looked at his watch—just fifteen the looked at strange young man to to persuade a strange young man to the sem to be desirable, so this little girl, whom nobody wanted, sat screened by a curtain of vines, listening breathlessly as a woman tried to persuade a strange young man to sat screened by a curtain of vines, listening breathlessly as a woman tried to persuade a strange young man to find a home for her among his people. She has never forgotten his laughing reply, though it was all very serious then, and the child's heart went out to the man, who was a lonely orphan himself. The ever fortunate boy might have been made useful about the studio, he had said, and it was then that little 'Jerry' formed the wild plan which seemed to her a very simple way out of a great difficulty."

"Clad in a shabby suit of her brother's, never dreaming of failure, she met you here in the twilight." The girl's eyes shone. "Then followed the golden days at the farm, and later, when she had been taught the sin of deceiving. 'Jerry' reasoned that the only reparation in her power would be to relieve you of the burden which you had not desired and to go back again to the only place she had known."

She was silent for a few moments. "The old housekeeper has been my trusted friend," she continued, "and in long letters we have rejoiced together over the success of your remarkable painting." She put out her hands impulsively. "It is rather late to beg forgiveness," she said, "and I can never hope to repay my great debt of gratitude."

Eagerly he clasped the extended hands. "My dear girl," he said, "when minutes to reach the station. "Runback as quick as you can, Jerry," he said. But the child clung to him desperately.

"I am goin' with you," he sobbed "I'm goin' to live with you."

Phillip stood irresolute for a moment: then, following an uncontrollable impulse, he caught the pathetic little figure up in his arms and ran to catch the train.

"We will give him one good summer," he explained apologetically to the surprised housekeeper, "then find a home for him some place."

It would have been difficult to tell which of the two enjoyed that summer most, the child, who throve like a plant lives would be changed into happiness.

Time is the only thing with which they seem to be well supplied. It is sequally hard to get anything done, for unless the party is willing to do the work requested he will find some plausible excuse. An American traveling across the country a few years ago found it necessary to have his horse shod at one of the small towns. There were three blacksmiths in the town. Of these one was sick, but had supplies, a second had no nails and the fairly no charcoal. As there was no lending among the craft the horse could not be shod.

The alarm of a fire at Matauoras,

Magazine, and I hastened to the scene, thinking at first that a battle was raging.

Leopards are essentially tree living and nocturnal animals. Sleeping in trees or caves by day, they are seldom disturbed. They do an incredible amount of mischief among cattle, calves, sheep and dors, being especially fond of killing and eating the latter. They seize their prey by the throat and cling with their claws until they succeed in breaking the spine or in by a reluctant burro.

A swivel pin in each end of the keg

A swivel pin in each end of the keg permitted it to roll freely, and ropes attached it to the animal. Behind walked it to the animal. Behind walked the fire brigade, a solitary peen, bearing a bucket. Arrived at the scene of the confiagration, the water in the barrel was poured into buckets and hauled to the roof of an adjacent house, whence it was flung on to the flames.

Everybody was greatly excited. The calmest thing of all was the fire, which burned steadily on till there was nothing left to consume. Then as the spectacle was over the people dispersed. Every one was satisfied except perhaps the unfortunate owner of the house that had been destroyed.

The Story of the Buried Prize of an English Buccaneer.

English Buccaneer.

An English buccaneer, having looted and fired a rich prize, found himself pursued in turn by a Spanish pirate, and in order to save his treasure sought some isolated shore on which to bury it until the time came to divide the spoils with his followers. So he ran into the Bahama group and, landing on a low lying strip of sand and palm trees, cached his plunder and, naming the place Fortune island, sailed away. He left a number of negro slaves behind to guard the buried treasure, and the present inhabitants are said to be inant party in the pending contest, The Berkshire trolley bill, the New Haven validation bill, the New Haven

On the Democratic side there is con siderable of a mixup as regards the cicket. The rival candidates are Conreseman Eugene N. Foss and forme State Senator James H. Vahev of State Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown. Vahey was fighting Dem-ocracy's battles when Foss was run-ning for congress and for the nom-ination for lieutenant governor on the Bepublican ticket. There are five the Lepublican ticket. There are five candidates for the Democratic nom-ination for lieutenant governor, all conditioned upon Vahey's withdrawal and giving Foss the first place on the ticket. They are: Former Mayor and former State Senator William P. Hayes of Springfield, Representative Thomas P. Riley of Maldon Mayor. Thomas P. Riley of Malden, Mayor John T. Coughlin of Fall River, for-mer Mayor Theobald M. Connor of Northampton, and former State Sen-ator Thomas P. Cassidy of Adams.

Vahey is just as much entitled to a third nomination as was "Billy" Russell; and, if he had "the price", he would receive it. Last year when Vahey was defeated by 7934 votes, Foss was defeated by 7758 votes by Forthhymp who relied 200 votes. Foss was dereated by 7.68 votes per prothingham, who poiled 2000 votes less than Draper. Foss's total vote was 1593 less than Vahey's total. In Boston, where the movement to make Foss governor had its genesis at the hands of Mayor Fitzgerald, Vahey received 1592 more votes than Fos-

It is well to bear in mind that Massachusetts is a Republican state, Massachusetts is a Republican state, that she seldom swings from her moorings, that this is a congressional year, that a United States senator is to be chosen, and that President Tatt and his administration are to be given a ringing endorsement by the Republican state convention. These facts, coupled with the facility of the Demicanists. coupled with the facility of the Democrats for blundering when they have a chance to win, and their custom of winning elections in the summer on paper and losing them at the poils on election day in November, may help one to believe that the old Bay State will be found safely anchored in the

ALL A MISTAKE.

By Which a Man Escapes One Bondage to Fall Into Another.

By EDWARD C. HANCOCK

I reached my destination at 11 o'clock at night, was driven to the L. hotel, was shown to my room and went to bed. The next morning I did not return to the room after breakfast, but did so at noon. An important matter of business absorbed my attention, and I was unmindful of everything else. My key did not work in the lock; but, turning the knob, the door opened. I concluded that either I or the mald who had put the room in order had left it unlocked.

Still thinking on other matters, I saw on the mantel a package done up in paper. It was about three inches long by two broad and an inch thick. At another time I would have exam-I reached my destination at 11 o'clock

She ran into the room while the porter kept me under observation.

Going to the stand to wash my hands, I discovered lying on it a ring set with two large diamonds.

I dropped my business matter and fixed my attention on the ring. Then I looked about the room. There was a trunk in it that was not mine. A wardrobe stood open, and I could see within articles of woman's apparel. I had got into the wrong room.

DIFFICULT TO SHOOT. Birds That Test the Skill of the Best

Birch That Test the Skill of the Best Marksmen.
We often hear the question as to which is the most difficult bird in the world to shoot. The answer is usually given in favor of the pheasant descending with closed wings from a higher level of flight, though a few give the preference to the second barrel shot at teal scared by the discharge of a first barrel and darting upward and in any direction but that which is and in any direction but that which is

When he stated his case I was astonished. A young widow from the city, twenty-four years old, had spent a summer in the neighborhood and had turned the heads of half the young men who had met her. Jorbert wished me to bring suit for him against her for $25,000 for breach of promise to marry him.

was the last man I should ever suspect of wishing to demand damages for his blighted affections.

I endeavored to dissuade him from taking action in the matter, saying that it would only injure him in the community and would do no good. Now and again one of these fascinators are let loose on the community and do a lot of harm among the men; there was no way to stop them or to punish them; the best way was to ignore them. If men were so foolish as to be Juped by them they must take the con-before she came into the office.

Nevertheless one thing I had learned. It was this. Mrs. Alvord was a witch. I was a bachelor and had never been in the slightest degree affected by any woman. Yet here within half an hour a woman had infatuated me. When she had left me with such a smile as she might have given me had When she had left me with such a smile as she might have given me had I been her attorney instead of Jorbert's, and the door closing shut her from my view, it seemed as if I had taken hashish or some other drug to set my brain waltzing through paradise. I spent the afternoon attempting to fix my mind on my routine work, but despite all I could do I was still talking with the young widow about a talking with the young widow about a ridiculous.

Within a week the widow came to see me three times. Her object, so she said, was to find a way out of the matter. It occurred to me that she was more likely to find her way into another matter of the same kind, with me for accuser. The second week she did not need to come to my office, for would count for a good deal. For my part, having made the acquaintance of the widow, I did not attach any serious meaning to what she had written, but the cold pen and ink words apparently meant quite enough to justify a finding for the plaintiff. I laid out my plan of attack, got my written evidence all where I could lay my hands on it and put all the papers in the safe pending the trial. But I did not put the widow in the safe. That is, I put her there, but she would not stay there. She was constantly looking at me from anywhere, nowhere, with those eyes of hers and that imperturbable smile, as much as to say: "Dear me! What a funny affair this is!"

When the case came up for trial I made the discovery that a young lawyer just admitted to the bar, one of the men whose hearts she had wrecked, was to conduct her case. I also learned that the defendant had weeked, was to conduct her case. I also learned that the defendant had been in town a fortnight, and, although she had not been to see me, she had made the acquaintance of the judge before whom the case would be tried. I knew then that I had nothing to hope for in the way of rulings from that judge. I considered it fortunate that the jury would not be impanied until the beginning of the trial or she would doubtless bold every one of them by the heartstrings. As they were being selected and she was asked if she objected to a juror she said. "Oh, no, not the slightest," and smiled, just smiled at him; that's all she needed to do to make sure that he would find a verdict for her.

For my part, I found a temporary antidote in my professional position. I became absorbed in my work of placing my evidence before the jury in its most favorable light. Though I say it myself, I did my work well and made a very strong case. As for the defense, there was no defense made worthy of the name. But all the while the widow sat in the presence of the court and smiled. If the judge was called upon to make a ruling she smiled at him and he ruled in ber favor. If I was making a strong point against her she smilled at the jury, the spectators, the reporters—any once, every one in the reporters—any once, ever reporters—any one, every one in the courtroom.

When the evidence was all in and the rebuttal had been made—or, rather, had not been made—the case was submitted to the jury. I knew before they retired that the widow had made the impression on them, as she had on every one, that the whole affair was a farce, besides having captivated them. They were out ten minutes and returned, finding for the plaintiff and awarding a damage of 2 cents.

A very small sum to pay for a broken heart.

When the widow left the courtroom when the widow left the courtroom every man in it arose and bowed to her as she passed out. She smiled on us all. It was not a smile of triumph; it was a smile of good will. Any other kind than the latter was not to be conceived of from this woman, who seemed to possess a heart big enough to take in all mankind.

she have an interview with my client. She smiled again and replied, "Not at present." When she left me not one step had been taken toward compromising the case or fighting it. I had gained no evidence from her as to how far the matter had gone between her and my client, whether he had a good or a poor case, whether she would settle or fight, whether she really cared anything for him or not. Indeed, I was no better informed than I had been before she came into the office.

Nevertheless one thing I had learned. It was this. Mrs. Alvord was a witch. I was a bachelor and had never been in the slightest degree affected by any woman. Yet here within half an hour a woman had infatuated me. When she had left me with such a Soon after this I received a note.

he make it to her instead of in the courts.

At last after all this fuss, after winning over not only her opponent's counsel (myself), but judge and jury, this woman had shown her colors. Cramming back my feelings, I sent my client the note.

He wrote me a reply directing me to inform the late defendant to his suit that, having shown her methods to the world as a caution signal to all young men, he had no further interest in the affair.

NEW ENGLAND AND THE TARIFF

One day in 1873 Dr. Van Dyck, manager of the press in connection with the work of propaganda of the Syrian avowed free trader and a statesman of the Bourbon school of the late Senator Vest, who, in Mr. Cleveland's time, declared that the Democratic party 'challenged the protected Industries to a fight of extermination.' Champ Clark has proclaimed that if first thing it will do will be to prepare Champ Clark has proclaimed that if his party carries the next house the first thing it will do will be to prepare and pass a downward reduction of schedule K, the schedule protecting the wool manufacturing industry of Massachusetts.

Massachusetts.

What Clark's Threat Means

"This proclamation makes the political issue sufficiently clear-cut in Massachusetts. If these southern Democratic leaders have their way they are going to shut up our woolen mills and transfer their business, so far as possible, to Europe, just as they did under the disastrous Gorman-Wilson experiment of 1894-1897, well remembered as black years of idleness and famine by the textile operatives of this commonwealth.

"The threat of Champ Clark and others of his kind to cut the throat of Massachusetts textile manufacturing if they are given the opportunity has if they are given the opportunity has in the street of the call el Ah War?" asked Dr. Van Dyck, "does it attack the government?" The pasha pointed out several passacs which criticised the brihery and corruption everywhere prevalent, per jury and lying among witnesses and public officials and the fact that "truth and fallen in the streets and equity could not enter."

"Are not these statements true?" said Dr. Van Dyck. "Your excellency ought to put a copy into the hands of every government official in your pessale. Is it not so?"

"Illust you now you not provide the brihery and corruption everywhere prevalent, per you and lying among witnesses and public officials and the fact that "truth a fallen in the streets and equity could not enter."

"Are not these statements true?" said Dr. Van Dyck. "Your excellency ought to put a copy into the hands of the call of the pasha." "Are not these statements true?" said Dr. Van Dyck. others of his kind to cut the throat of Massachusetts textile manufacturing if they are given the opportunity has already had its inevitable effect upon the condition of employment in our textile centres. The prospect that the protective tariff may be violently reduced and that 'cheap' goods will gain pour in from Europe, as during the Gorman-Wilson regime, has sharply affected the market for Massachusetts-made fabrics. Euyers have reduced or postponed their purchase the condition of the condit sharply affected the market for Massachusetts-made fabrics. Buyers have reduced or postponed their purchases so far as possible, and for some time probably 40 percent of the productive wool manufacturing machinery of Massachusetts has been chinery of Massachusetts has been with the first purchase of my sight?

"And so," concluded the pasha, "we know that these reflections on our brown that these reflections on our now, as a sweeping Democratic victory in November seems less certain. But the mischief already done and beyond remedy is immense, and the brunt of the injury of these political anti-tar-iff threats has fallen upon the wage-propers of the angles of the same propersion of the earners of the commonwealth who have lost employment.

No Duties Raised, Prices Lowered
"A few months ago the cry was befing raised that the new AldrichPayne tariff would enormously increase the cost of clothing. This new tariff, by the way, had not increased a single duty in the wool and woolen schedule. The only changes were a few slight reductions. Otherwise the schedule was exactly the same as it had been for twelve years under the Dingley law. There had saile as it made left in twelve years own Radolph of Hapsburg, said Nabebeen advances in the cost of the raw wool. But that condition proved temporary, for wool prices soon fell. And woolen fabrics now being offered by manufacturers reflect the change of prices in wool and the general reduction of cost, as compared with the figures of previous years. Thus, for example, the well-known standard serge of the American Woolen company numbered 3192 is available at pany numbered 3192 is available at pany numbered 3192 is available at $1.30 a yard this year, as compared with $1.50 last year. Unfinished worsteds that sold for $1.60 a yard a year ago are now offered at $1.47½. There are similar declines in the price of dress goods, and some manufacturers are selling fabrics today at lower prices than have obtained since

These facts in the case were frankly stated by practical manufacturers at the time, but these authoritative statements were ignored by the tariff-hating press and politicians.

No Moropoly in Woolen Manufactures "There is no trust or monopoly in

"There is no trust or monopoly in the wool manufacturing industry. Competition among the one thousand woolen milis of America is incessant and keen, and it is only the enormous volume of production that enables manufacturers to make a reasonable profit, which in this particular industry, taking one year with another, does not average far from 6 percent. The program of Champ Clark and the tariff smashers would compel a reduction of these moderate dividends and a reduction of the wages of the work-people. which are the dividends and a reduction of the wages of the work-people. which are the distributions in the mind and a great scene of wretchedness is sketched out by a morsel of misguided and indigestible food.

During his long and impassioned appeal to the lords to refrain from rejecting the reform bill of 1832 "five tumblers of mulied port, with a dash of brandy, were brought to him at intervals." When he came to his last sentence ("I warn you, I implore you—yea, on my bended knee I supplicate you—reject not this bill") he knelt on the woolsack, whence he slipped to the floor. It is recorded in apped to the floor. THE PARSON'S CHECKS.

They Were Politely Drawn, but the Bank Threw Them Out.

According to George Cary Eggleston, Virginians of aute bellum days showed great indifference in money matters. Money in the form of coin was rarely seen. The planters were in the babit of writing checks on a silp of foolscap, instructing the bank to "please" pay the amount specified. Eggleston says: "This custom of paying by check so strongly commended itself to a certain unworldly parson of my time that he resorted to it on one occasion in entertie ignorance and inocence of the necessity of having a bank deposit as a preliminary to the drawing of checks. He went to Richmond and bought a year's supplies for his little plant-till was too small to be called a plantation—and for each purchase he drew a particularly polite check. DEEP SEA WATER.

In an article on gold leaf in the Magazine of Commerce John Mastin says that just as the date of the discovery of gold is too remote even to be guessed at so is the origin of gold leaf lost in antiquity.

On some of the most ancient mummers and the skin, tongue, teeth, etc., and in some instances on the coffins also. It also appears on tombs, monuments and the like, and, strange to say, though gilding with "thin sheets of hammered gold" and "skins of gold"—otherwise gold leaf—was known to be practiced at least in the eight century B. C., the process of bringing the gold into these fine sheets or "skins" was, at any rate in the eleventh century A. D., substantially the same as that used today, no advance whatever having been made in the intervening nine centuries.

Further, on some of the Grecian pottery of the fifth century the gold leaf used is as thin as that used today, so that in results obtained also we have not advanced in the least, but still keep practically to the same average thickness as that used on the Egyptian coffins of the third century A. D. and most of the Greek vases of the fifth.

the same railway compartment as a party of golfers. "I found fearful trouble this morning," said one. "At the first I fell right into the middle of the first I fell right into the middle of a prickly gorse bush, and at the second I was stuck up on the top of a tree. I pitched out of bounds into the farmyard at the third, got caught by the wire at the fourth. I stuck fast in a deep hole at the fifth, found my-self buried in mud at the sixth. I was lying in a heap of rough flints at the seventh, got lost at the eighth and finished up at the bottom of that dirty ditch at the last hole."

RAINING CATS AND DOGS.

Various Explanations of the Origin of This Expression. Many explanations have been given Many explanations have been given of the origin of the expression "raining cats and dogs." One is that it is a perversion of the French "catadoupe," a waterfall—"it is raining a catadoupes," or cataracts. Another explanation is that the male blossoms of the willow tree, which are used on Palm Sunday to represent the branches of palm, were called "cats and dogs" in some parts of England, where they increase. parts of England, where they increas parts of England, where they increase rapidly after a few warm April showers, and the belief prevailed that the rain brought them.

Others trace the saying to northern mythology, in which the cat is said to have great influence on the weather, and sallors still have a saying. "The cat has a raile of wind in her tail." cat has a gale of wind in her tail, cat has a gale of wind in her tail," when she is unusually frisky. Witches that rode upon the storms were said to assume the form of cats, and the stormy northwest wind is called "the cat's nose" in the Harz mountains even at the present day. Then the dog is a symbol of wind, which in old German pictures is figured as the head of a dog or wolf from which blasts issue. The cat therefore symbolizes a down. The cat therefore symbolizes a down pour of rain; the dog, strong gusts of wind, which accompany it, and so a rain "of cats and dogs" is a heavy rain with wind.

Awbassi Nai, happened by accident to kill a woman. On hearing this the rest gathered together and prayed that, if he meant to slay them, he would bring destruction on all together rather than kill them one by one.

Awbassi was sorry for the grief he had caused and offered as compensation to give them anything they should choose out of all his possessions. They begged him to mention what he had to give and said that they would all cry "Yes" when he named the thing they wished to have.

Awbassi mentioned one by one all his fruits, fowls and beasts, but at each they shouted "No." At length the list was nearly ended—only one thing remained to offer.

"Will you, then, take man?" asked Awbassi at last. "Yes!" they roared in a great shout, and, catching hold of one another, danced for joy at the thought of the gift Awbassi was sending.

A party of travelers was assembled on the upper deck of the ocean liner Eric, four days out from Southamp-ton, England, bound for New York. Walter Ricker had met and traveled with Miss Eugenia Floyd. Signs and Omens to Which the Sailor Grimly Clings.

A JOKE THAT PROVED FATAL.

Proved Too Much For the Norse-man — A Bucket of Water That Stopped a Mysterious Wailing.

Stopped a Mysterious Wailing.

It is a well known fact that in the past the sailor was among the most superstitious of mortals, and even in these enlightened days there are a goodly number of old sails who cling tenaciously to their bellef in certain signs and portents. Some, ne doubt, of these superstitions have vanished altogether into the limbo of forgotten things, but there will always be a credulous few who will shake their heads solemnly and prophesy dismally if a knife is stuck in the mast or an albatross or a stormy petrel is captured and brought on board. The origin of some of these superstitions cannot be traced. Many of them have been handed down from father to son for a great number of years, with a for a great number of years, when the contains the proposition of the great number of years, when it been handed down from father to son for a great number of years, with a touch probably added here and there, turning a comparatively ordinary sto-ry into a weird and mysterious legend. And speak to him of wrecks.

A story is told of a brigantine which numbered several extremely superstitious men among her crew. One night when there was no moon and a slight ground swell was running the watch, who happened to be the most superstitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the stitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the very surface of the sea. The mate and the helmsman also heard it, but the former lacked imagination, and, although he was certainly interested, he nearly blew the watch's head off when he ventured to suggest mermalds. The helmsman did not feel quite happy, but he had to stick to the wheel. The watch was pale with terror, but he kept silence owing to the mate's compilmentary references to his courage and abilities. Slowly the sound began to move along the ship's side, becoming more and more agonized as it approached. This annoyed the mate, and, going to the side of the vessel, he waitproached. This annoyed the mate, and, going to the side of the vessel, he waited until he had located the sound and then emptied a bucket of water over the rail. There was a gasp, then dead silence, and nothing more was heard that high.

that night.

When the watch went off duty he of course gave a detailed and lurid account of the incident to his shipmates, who listened, as he thought, in awed silence and then called on one of the audience for his version of the matter. This man, a Tyne-sider, who dearly loved a joke and had no respect at all for hoary superstitions, had conspired with his fellows to play a trick on the watch. On the night in question he had crept over the bows without a sound, carrying with him the tion he had crept over the bows without a sound, carrying with him the cat's head out of the bag, which he tied round the animal's neck so that it could not escape. He then applied his teeth to the unfortunate animal's tail.

Everybody knows the fearsome sounds

Aided by two other sailors, a white shirt and some string, a very presentable "ghost" was arranged in the foc'sle on the night the Norseman was on watch. He was to be allowed mas on watch. He was to be allowed only a glimpse of the "spirit" on entering the foc'sle, and it was then to vanish from view, being jerked by means of a string underneath the bunk of one of the jokers. Everything was ready, and the three conspirators lay in their bunks awaiting their victim. Unfortunately they all 'fell asleep, to be suddenly awakened by a loud cry from the Norwegian. He stood gazing at the "ghost," the dim light shed by the famp falling on his ghastly face. The three were about to call out to him when he spoke. "No, no," he cried, "I did not mean to kill you, Morgan! Oh, mercy, mercy!" And he rushed madly from the foc'sle. Terrified, his shipmates followed him, but as they reached the deck they saw the Norwegian throw himself into the sea.—London Globe. was on watch. He was to be allowed

Kissing In Iceland.

Among old time laws against kissing those of Iceland appear to have been the most severe. Banishment was the penalty laid down for kissing another man's wife, either with or without her man's wife, either with or without bet consent. The same punishment was enforced for kissing an unmarried woman against her will; if it could be proved that she had consented to be kissed the offender was still liable to a fine of a great quantity of cloth for each offense.

the Played a Momentous Part in American History.

The war between this country and England in 1812 was caused by one vote, and, stranger still, the small margin came from a pig getting its head stuck in a rail fence. It was a Rhode Island fence at that, but built much like a Virginia worm fence.

They were having an election of memiters of the legislature in Rhode Island. One Federalist put off going to the election and left himself just time enough to get there before the poils closed. Just as he got on his horse and started for town he heard a pig squeal. He looked around and saw that the pig had its head jammed into that old rail fence, and anybody who knows anything about hogs knows that the hogs would have eaten that pig up if it hadn't been rescued. The farmer stopped long enough to the polls they were closed. He was too late.

From morning until night.
He said they robbed the people and

The Way the Famous Humorist In Company With W. D. Howells Did Not Attend the Centennial of the Battle of the Minutemen at Concord.

In his reminiscences of Mark Twain in Harper's Magazine W. D. Howells tells amusingly of the time when he and Mr. Clemens missed the anniver-

"When the train stopped we found it packed inside and out. People stood dense on the platforms of the cars. To our startled eyes they seemed to project from the windows, and unless memory betrays me they lay strewn upon the roofs like brakemen slain at the post of duty. We remounted the fame worn steps of Porter's station and began exploring North Cambridge for some means of transportation overland to Concord, for we were that far on the road by which the British went and came on the day of the battle. The liverymen whom we appealed to received us, some with compassion, received us, some with compassion, some with derision, but in either mood convinced us that we could not have hired a cat to attempt our conveyance, much less a horse or vehicle of any

"It was a raw, windy day, very unlike the exceptionally hot April day when the routed redcoats, pursued by the Colonials, fled panting back to Boston, with 'their tongues hanging out like dogs,' but we could not take due comfort in the vision of their discomfiture. We could almost envy them, for they had at least got to Concord.

A swift procession of coaches, carriages and buggles, all going to Concord, parsed us, inert and helpless, on cord, passed us, inert and helpless, on the sidewalk in the peculiarly cold mud of North Cambridge. We began to wonder if we might not stop one of

The opening of the courts in an assize town in England is always a great day for the residents. Emily Frances Pollard.

On the evening of August twelfth, in the quiet home where for many years she had lived, there passed from earth one whose memory will long be dear to the many friends who loved her. Miss Emily Frances Pollard's life from the point of view of the casual observer was uneventful, yet it was a life of large interests, of deep experience, and of abiding influence. She was born in Charlestown in 1888, on of the six children of Asa D. and of the six children of Asa D. and Hannah Wallace Pollard, two of whom, Miss Mary Pollard of this city and Mr. Charles H. Pollard of Albany and Mr. Charles H. Pollard of Albany survive her. Her mother was the sis-ter of Rev. Cyrus Wallace, the greatly esteemed minister of Manchester, New Hampshire. Her aducation was re-ceived at the old Bradford Academy. ceived at the old Bradford Academy, of such honorable history, and at the Charlestown Female Seminary, where Miss Susan E. Edgell, so long loved in Woburn, was a teacher. That education developed in her a great love of the best literature and made her very discriminating in her literary tastes, qualities of high value to the public in later years. In 1859 she came with the family to Woburn, where her brother, Hon. Joseph G. Pollard, was a well known and highly respected manufacturer whose influence in the higher life of the city was great. His higher life of the city was great. His death in 1898, which was a serious loss to the community, was especially felt by the sisters who shared and made Miss Pollard's education and tastes

Miss Pollard's education and tastes led her naturally to interest in things intellectual and sdiritual. She was a charter member of the Woburn Woman's Club, but other duties gradnally withdrew her from active service in the Club. For thirty-one years prior to her death she served the public

The opening attraction of the season at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, on Monday evening, August 22 od, will be the ever popular romantic actor, Wright Lorimer, presenting his famous shiblical spectacle, "The Shepherd King." Although the play has been seen several times in Boston. its popularity seems ever on the increase. On each successive visit the demands for seats is greater and efforts have been made to induce Mr. Lorimer to take a theatre in the hub for an indefinite period of time. "The Shepherd King" is one of those rare plays that appeals to the church going public by its highly moral tone and influence, as well as by its reverent and masterly treatment of the life-story of that most beloved of biblical heroes, David. The Sun.

It is computed that the temperature of the sun would be expressed by 18, 000 degrees of Fahrehhelt's thermometer, or about ninety times the temperature of boiling water. This is about five times the temperature that man is able to produce by artificial means. The light given off from the surface of the sun is reckoned as being 5,300 times more intense than that of the molten metal in a Bessemer converter, at though that is of an almost blinding brilliancy, or, if we compare it with the oxyhydrogen flame, the sun sheds a light equal in brilliancy to 146 times the intensity of the limelight.

He saw in a relative, Roger Cruikshank, one capable by shrewdness, foresight and meanness of increasing the estate intended for a young girl whose heart would rather lead her to scatter than add to it. He therefore left a provision in the will to finsure Cruikshank's management of the property. Florence was to marry thim. By the terms of the will Cruikshank and only to refuse to marry the legatee to enale her to inherit without him included. This he refused to do, and his action called forth the scathing words with which this story begins.

As it was, Dresser was put on trial for his life, and that life depended upon which had the greater incentity, the man who built upon the theory that the accused was guilty or the man who by his diagrams was trying to prove that the dead man shot himself. The result in this case was that the theory of the prosecutor is stablished to the satisfaction of the fary, and he showed conclusively by his opponent's diagrams that a shot fired in accordance therewith would accordance therewith would miss the mark by two and one-half

As accessory to his theory counsel for the defense proved that there was in-sanity in the family of the deceased and that his grandfather had shot him-self. He further proved that the day of the death or the suicide had been lowering, wild and blustery—just such a day as would influence one with relicidal intent to commit the act. But all this crumbled before the masterly-handling of the matter of the motive for the crime. By Cruikshank's death Dresser would possess the girl he loved and a fortune. If Cruikshank lived Dresser would lose the fortune. Nevertheless it was generally admitted that the conviction of Adrian Dresser was due to the ability of the prosecutor, who tossed fact and fiction up before the jury so rapidly that they could not distinguish between them. However this may be, he was convicted.

Suicide by Swallowing Gold.
Suicide by swallowing gold is sometimes accomplished in China. The following is an authoritative account, written by a very learned Chinese for the Westminster Gazette, of how this much contested form of suicide is accomplished:

"In swallowing gold it is not loose gold leaf or gold dust that is swallowed, but a solid lump of gold, or even a gold ring, weighing about half an ounce. Gold is not at any time of a corrupting nature, but when a lump of it is swallowed and gets into the bowel it falls, on account of its intrinsic weight, to rise and surmount the convolutions of the bowels and can therefore never complete its passage. After two or three days it therefore sinks through the bowel and destroys life without any suffering."

DIVIDED THE MESSAGE.

The Way a Financier's Clerk Extemporized a Cipher.

When Wall street first caught the fever for 'industrial combinations' and began the reorganization of every thing in sight one of the votaries of high finance found himself in Chicago in extreme need of communicating with his New York office.

He almost completed an arrangement for the consolidation of several western enterprises, but in order to get the final authority he needed from New York he must explain all he had done by wire to his partners.

There was no time to write. He had no cipher code. For a long time he tried to think out some way to send the information so that it would be plain to his partners and meaningless to any one else. His secret was a valuable one and once sent over the wire might be sold out to his rivais in Wall street for a large sum.

At last he decided to take the chances in plain English. Accordingly he wrote the message and gave it to his assistant to send. Half an hour.

sometimes when one is refused with lofty contempt:

"That's all right, old girl. Truth is I only asked you because I was feeling a bit sorry for you."

The main point is to be ready witted enough to keep your hat and stick in your hand. Do not leave the house whistling, though. It prevents you from exhibiting an amused smile when she peeps at you from behind the front room curtains.

With luck and practice you will be able to take a refusal of marriage quite well. Don't propose merely for practice, however. Your luck may now hold out.—London Opinion.

Insect Wonders.

Nothing can exceed the perfection of the minutest parts of the insect organization in general. The finest strand in a spider's web, which can scarcely be seen, is said to be composed of no less than 4,000 threads. On a single wing of a butterfly have been found 100,000 scales and on that of a silkworm moth 400,000, each of these minute scales being a marvel of beauty and completeness in itself. So thin are the wings of many insects that 50,000 placed over each other would only be a quarter of an inch thick, and yet, thin as they are, each is double.

the Whole Body.

A good, wide, open mouthed yawn is a splendid thing for the whole body. A yawn is nature's demand for rest. Some people think they only yawn because they are sleepy, but this is not so. You yawn because you are tired. You may be sleepy also, but that is not the real cause of your yawning. You are sleepy because you are tired, and you yawn because you are tired. Whenever you feel like yawning just yawn. Don't try to suppress it be-

Whenever you feel like yawning just yawn. Don't try to suppress it be cause you think it is impolite to yawn. Put your hand over your mouth if you want to, but let the yawn come. And if you are where you can stretch at the same time that you yawn just stretch and yawn. This is nature's way of stretching and relaxing the muscles. Don't te afraid to open your mouth wide and yawn and stretch whenever you feel like it. Indeed, if you are very tired, but do not feel like yawning, there is nothing that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight back so quickly as to sit on a straight back chair and, lifting your feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as

One of the interesting things in re-One of the interesting things in regard to the operation of the Payne-Aldrich tariff act is the fact reported by the bureau of commerce and labor that exports of manufactures in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, exceeded those of any earlier year; and also that imports of manufacturers' restories for the exposure of the properties Officials Bothered Her.
On one of the recently arriving transathantic steamers was a young woman whose extreme economy had not permitted any lavish expenditure abroad. But she had repeatedly referred with commendable pride to the material for two slik dresses she had burchased at a bargain which she was bringing home for her mother and sister. Even the suggestion of one sympathetic listener that she would have to pay duty produced merely a tem Today the United States seems to be coming fast the leader among manu facturing nations and it does not need the vision of a prophet to conjecture that ere long she will lead the world in this line of enterprise.

So long as we continue to produce the most of our raw materials and manufacture them into goods in this country, so long will American labor be employed at equitable wages. It has often been shown that if we buy our manufactured goods in Europe our money goes to the payment of European wages and not to support of our own American working men. The principle of a protective tariff for which the Republican party has stood for more than fifty years is to place a customs tax upon imported goods sufficient to make up the difference between low wages paid abroad and the high wages paid in the United States, and at the same time protect our own manufacturers against the goods of the foreigners. It is easy to see that if our tariff were put any low-So long as we continue to produce evidence he will find in many cases where the tariff has been reduced, that prices have advanced as rapidly and as radically as on those few articles on which the tariff was increased. He will even find that the prices of many articles which have now been placed on the free list are much higher than they were before. Certainly in a tariff bill where the tariff on a large part of the items was left as it was before, or decreased, the tendency should be toward lower prices if the argument advanced against the tariff nothing to the charge that the tariff is largely responsible for high prices. The duty on hides was taken off in the Payne tariff act, but not with stand-ing that fact, the prices of leather advanced steadily and leather is at a higher price mark today than before the tariff law was enacted.

The Orange and Raisin Industries it is interesting to note that during the last decade or two domestic pro-duction has been rapidily surplanting certain classes of fruit formerly im-ported in large quantities. This applies especially to raisins and oranges. Some years ago a duty was imposed upon imports of these fruits. Today it is recognized that the finest grade A chicken loaf is sometimes garnished with stuffed olives and parsley.

competition of cheap labor cou must have been so fierce as to have discouraged the American fruit grower in his effort to develop this industry.

Just what the country is doing in the matter of iron and steel may be seen from the following figures; In forty years, from 1881 to 1900, our imports of iron and steel manufactures imports of iron and steel manufactures amounted to $1,409,000,000, while our exports in the same line were $973,000,000. The excess of imports over exports was $436,000,000. In the ten years, from 1900 to 1910, our imports of manufactured iron and steel amounted to $307,000,000, while our exports totalled $1,411,000,000

For the ten years the excess of ou exports over our imports was $1,104,

This little statement shows in

This little statement shows in an untshell the reversed conditions in the steel industry. Whereas our exports were formerly small and our imports large, our imports today in the line of steel are growing less and less, while our exports are constantly and rapidly increasing. The country is become more and more self-supporting nation and this has come abou through a maintenance of this protective tariff.

Mayor Fitzgerald is Criticised The Boston finance commission has sent a letter to Mayor Fitzgerald roundly criticising appointments which he has made during the first six months of his term of office, and charging him with having played politics from city hall. The commission also recommends that the mayor observe the letter and spirit of the new charter amendment hereafter in new charter amendment hereafter in making appointments and confine himself to the larger and more important administrative problems, ceasing to interfere with the heads of departments in the appointment or removal of petty officials.

The could or should have been found letter goes on to state that fifteen o the mayor's twenty-two new appointments to paid positions as heads of important departments appear to have been made as rewards for political support.

MANY KINDS OF FLEAS.

About 400 Different Species Are Known to Naturalists.
One of the first naturalists who demight survive the influx of cheap labor products. Anyone who has studied impartially the tariff question to any extent must see that the first one to suffer by foreign competition is the wage earner, and then the manufacturer.

The Tariff and Labor

Most manufacturers in this country say they are already economizing in every way in order to produce their goods at as low a price as possible. The the very way in order to produce their goods at as low a price as possible. The body might reduce the cost of their products seem to be labor. Very few manufacturers would wish to cut wages to any lower point than that at which they now stand, but if compelled to do so by the sharp competition of foreigners through a radical reduction of the tariff they say they would be obliged to adopt this course or face utter ruin.

It is easy to say that the tariff is responsible for the present high prices of the necessities of life. It is, however, impossible to prove it because all the evidence points in the opposite direction. The man who does not stop to consider the facts of the case may be deceived into believing that the tariff is the cause of the present prices. If he stops to examine the evidence he will find in many cases where the tariff has been reduced, that the target shows advanced as radidy and

DANCING STARS.

DANCING STARS.

The Twinklers Seem to Jump When Viewed Through a Telescope.
One of the most interesting things appearing in the telescope when that instrument is pointing heavenward is the appearance of jumping stars. Of course we can see stars twinkle without a telescope, but with a telescope they may be seen to jump and actually to dance. The cause is the same mixing currents of light and heavy air causing refraction or bending of the rays of light coming from the star. We can see the same phenomenon by looking at a small object in a room through the air directly over a hot radiator. The object seems to jump and dance as if playing hide and seek with itself.

This jumping in the telescope or twinkling to the naked eye has also been explained by what is called interference. If two sources of light are placed close to each other, then on a screen placed properly we can catch an alternate band of white and dark lines. Of course if the eye be placed at a dark line it can see neither sources of light. The production of these dark lines it can be shown that if the star has polychromatic light it can and has actually been observed to change color from this effect alone.

The best time to observe this effect of the coent. In like manner it can be shown that if the star has polychromatic light it can and has actually been observed to change color from this effect alone.

The best time to observe this effect of star dancing is on a cold, crispinght. The telescope should be pointed to a twinkling star as near the horizon as can be found, as to see a star on the horizon we have to look through much more atmosphere than to see one in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied wood in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied wood in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied wood in the zenith, and there is consequently more chance for varied wood in the zenith, and there is the consequently more chance for varied wood in the zenith and the zenith and the zenith and t

THE STICK CAME BACK.

Coleridge Was In the Habit of Losing and Recovering It.

Of walking sticks there is no end. For interesting sticks, however, the one which Coleridge was in the habit of losing during his tramping days must take first place. The philosopher was never happy till he had got it back. He sent the crier round. Here is the cry, as noted by Mr. Lucas in one of his essays: 'Missing, a curious walking stick. On one side it displays the head of an eagle, the eyes of which represent rising suns and the ears Turkish crescents. On the other side is the portrait of the owner in woodwork. Around the neck is a Queen Elizabeth's ruff in tin. All down it waves the line of beauty in very ugly carving.'

And then came the appeal and warning note: 'If any gentleman (or lady) has fallen in love with the above de-

Astley ly a ring of ropes and stakes. Primi-tive as were the arrangements, Astley soon attracted good audiences and was able to add to his program conjuring transparencies, vaulting and tumbling with displays of fireworks. "We will have to break the news to Mary tonight." I said anxiously. "She'll take it hard after waiting all these years for a $30,000 diamoud necklace and then have it stolen from under her very nose. Whew!"

We sat in melancholy silence for an hour; then the doorbell rang and Stiffins ushered in a small, stupid looking little man, with ill fitting clothes and grimy bands. He tendered a printed eard.

"Ah, Mr. Bump—be seated," I said, after introducing the detective to Jim. I found a box of cigars, and we lighted

This afternoon we opened the safe to check off the bonds and arrange for their transfer to my wife, and we had discovered the jewel case to be empty. Mr. Bump's eyes darted from Jim's distressed face to my own and spoke for the first time since entering the house.

"You're a darling!" cried her brother shen 1 had released her. "But, Many, tear, you, cr-speculated; it's against the window latches and looked up the himney.

"What do you mean?" sputtered Jimmy threateningly.

"I mean when a firm of architects is pressed for $10,000 and they hold its worth in trust for a relative it's an easy matter to raise the money and call in the central office to cook up a robbery yarn," he said brutally. "Now gents, I'll give you till tomorrow afternoon to produce that necklace."

The door closed behind his shrinking form, and Jim and I tottered into opposite chairs and stared aghast at each other.

"Fool idea, that, your calling up."

Sir Richard Steele's "full buttoned black wig" cost 50 guineas (about 2555), and the fashion became so cumbrous that Colley Clibber when playing "The Fool of Fashion" to sattrize the styles introduced a wig of flax so large that it was brought on the stage that it was brought on the stage.

"It's his business to snoop. That's what you hired him for," I remarked coldly.

the Celestial Bodies.

If the planet Mars be really inhabited the people who live there must be an exceedingly aglie race. The average weight of a man is about 140 pounds, but the force of gravity on Mars is so much less than on the earth that the 140 pound man would weigh only fifty-three pounds if he were transported thither. With such weigh only fifty-three pounds if he light weight, and still retaining the same strength, an individual would be able to run with the speed of an express train, go skipping over ten foot walls and do various other extraordinary things. On the moon a man would be even lighter.

But on the sun our 140 pounder would have his troubles. Instead of being an airy individual he would being an airy individual he would weigh in the neighborhood of a ton and three-quarters. He would probably have the greatest difficulty in raising his hand, for that member would weigh about 300 pounds.

THE NEW TELEPHONE RATES

BULLETIN No. 1

We have accepted the recommendations of the Massachusetts Highway Commission relative to rates and service in the Boston and Suburban Districts and will make them effective as soon as practicable.

It is impossible at this time, because of the extensive preparation required, to fix a date for the complete application of the new schedule in all parts of the territory, but BY NOVEMBER I we expect to be able to offer service under the provisions of this schedule TO THOSE WHO DESIRE IT.

New subscribers desiring immediate service will be taken subject to present rates until facilities for operation under the new schedule are supplied, at which time, after due notice, they will be transferred to the new schedule

In some of our exchanges these facilities can be furnished within a few weeks; in others it will be a matter of months.

It is our desire to apply these new rates without unnecessary delay and to give them a complete and impartial trial.

The rewriting of upwards of one hundred thousand contracts, the rearrangement of subscribers' lines and numbers to conform thereto, the reconstruction of switchboards, and the building of the large number of additional lines required, is a large task and one to be carried out under careful plans providing both for the doing of the work and for the least possible disturbance of the service.

We ask the indulgence of our subscribers, therefore, while planning and executing these changes. Before inviting their acceptance of this new schedule we shall issue a series of bulletins giving the fullest publicity to the various rates quoted and such explanation as may seem necessary to a clear understanding of them. We shall also supply such detailed information or advice as they may request regarding their individual telephone requirements, in order that they may select the particular class of service best suited to their needs.

The following recapitulation may anticipate many inquiries:

We expect by November 1 to be able to offer service in any exchange, in accordance with the new schedule, to those who desire it.

2. The changes necessary for complete operation under the new schedule cannot be made for several months.

3. Until the Company can furnish service under the new schedule, present rates may be retained by those having existing contracts thereunder. Before any change in schedules is made due notice will be given.

Wedding ring Mottoes.

When postes or mottoes inscriber inside wedding rings were first introduced does not seem to be known duced does not seem to be known, but from the sixteenth century unit the middle of the eighteenth it was customary to have them engraved on rings. These motioes seldon consisted of more than two lines of a verse, often of only one, but there are a few instances known where three lines were used. Some of these postes are very quaint and curious, and a few reach a high standard of poetic beauty. The South Kensington museum has a good collection of nosy beauty. The South Kensington mu seum has a good collection of pos-rings, and among them are the fol-lowing inscriptions: "United hearts death only parts;" "Let us share in joy and care;" "Love and live hap-pily."—London Standard.

"Evenin', Miss Higgins!" says I.

"Been workin' hard today?"

"Not very," says I. "Leastaways I hain't been workin' at all the way I used to work when I done the plowin' and sich like myself. I got so many men workin' for me now I just look after em."

"You got a fine farm," says she.
"Reckon," says I.

"Reckon," says I.
"There's only one thing missin',"

"What's that?" says I.

"I always heard," she said at this,

me taikin about it some more, though the horses was tuggin' to git on and keepin' me pullin' at 'em. I tak 'em to the river and brought 'em back to the barn, and all the while I was thinkin' who that gal was that wanted me so bad. I thort over all the gals roundabout, but couldn't hit on any one of 'em as had ever appeared to take any interest into me. Then I remembered the barn dance a week before and all the gals I'd danced with but I couldn't think o' any one on 'em as had looked longin' at me. a I wondered if it could be Marthy.

There was a big cornhuskin' a few days after my meetin' with Sairy Higgins, and I was there. So was Marthy. She was sittin' on a pile of corn, and I jined her, both huskin' hard. When I struck a red ear I tried to kiss her, and she fit.

But later on, when I was huskin' with Henzi Jenkins. I got another red with Henzi Jenkins. I got another red and she iii.

But later on, when I was huskin' with Hepzi Jenkins, I got another red ear and kissed her without her makin' any fuss at all. So I concluded to name Hepzi for my first guess.

When I went to see Sairy Higgins on Sunday night I found her with a new dress on and lookin' spick and span. When I tole her I'd thort furst o' namin' Marthy Beams, but had settled on Hepzi Jenkins and why I'd changed from one to the other she larfed hard and said: "I heard you was a fool about gals, but I didn't think you was as big a fool as that. You'd orter known that Marthy wanted y' to kiss her, and Hepzi didn't care whether you kissed her or not."

Waal, Sairy and I set together till 10 o'clock; then I went away. I kep' my eye skinned durin' the week for some other gal as looked as if she'd taken a likin' to me, but I could see nothin' particular in ary one of 'em. Sunday come, and I hadn't a guess. Then a suddent thort struck me. Sairy had admitted that Marthy Beams-had wanted me to kiss her. "She is the gal, after."

She said I'd struck it dead wrong. I didn't git away from the Higginses till 11 o'clock that Sunday night. I started to go several times, but Sairy always called me back to tell me somethin'. When I did git away and walked along the road under the struight it occured to me that I'd had a bang-up fine evenin'. And it struck me with a heap o' force that I wouldn't mind havin' Sairy herself to hum, so's I wouldn't have to go out anywhere

But I'd made up a pictur' in my mind of the gal that wanted me, and I kep' a-dressin' it up finer and finer from week to week till when I called on Sairy for the third guess I tole her I didn't want none o' the gals I knowed—I wanted the pictur'.

IRONCLAD CASTE.

Its Rule Among the Hindus Absolute and Unchangeable.

THE POWER OF THE BRAHMAN

Wed Into His Family or Touch His Hand-Tyrannical Social Divisions.

Caste distinction in India is a thing difficult for a foreigner to comprehend. All the racial or religious distinctions which separate European nations from each other and divide them within themselves do not equal the number of classes into which the Hindus are divided by what is known to be seen to be seen to be sufficient to the seen to be seen to classes into which the Hindus are di-vided by what is known as "caste."

The 200,000.000 Hindus are made up of diverse racial elements and speak about nineteen developed languages and oves 100 dialects. They are again divided into over 3.000 castes, most of them with subcastes. One of these castes, the Brahmans, is split up into more than 800 subcastes, of which none will intermarry and few will eat to-gether.

There are, however, two properties es sential to a true caste—first, there is no entry except by birth; second, marriage outside the caste is absolutely forbidden. To preserve the purity and maintain the exclusiveness of the society many minute rules of conduct, many restrictions on food and many ceremonial observances are imposed on the members and enforced by penalties which cannot be evaded, against which there is no appeal and which in extreme cases follow the offender beyond the grave.

But that is not all. The relations of castes to each other are as much a sential to a true caste-first, there is no riles for their internal regulation. The Brahmans are the highest admittedly and undoubtedly superior to all the rest. After them come those who are acknowledged to be twice born. The less honored follow in a graduated descent until the untouchable and unspeakable are reached at the lowest depth.

It may be urged that the separation between the Brahman and, let us say, the Kurmi market gardener is no wider than that between the peer of the United Kingdom and the coal miner. There is this essential difference—that it is impossible for an Indian to change his caste. The coal miner may be elected to parliament, may become a cabinet minister and if he can make money enough may marry his son to a

On the other hand, the sug-gestion that a man of a lower caste might rise to an equality or nearer to an equality with members of a caste above him is unthinkable. One of the strongest bills announced B. F. Keith's theatre in a long time is that of next week. Among the big features will be Elfie Fay, the comic opera star; "The Models of the Jardin opera star; "The Models of the Jardin de Paris;" with Carl Henry; Lester Lonergan and Amy Ricards; Herzog's big troupe of trained horses and many other features of equal importance.

The theatrical annals of Boston de ot record such a towering success as 'The Round Up," Klaw & Erlanger's "The Round Up," Klaw & Erlanger's stupendous production of Edmund Day's famous drama, which broke all records for attendance last season. It returns for a limited engagement to the Boston Theatre beginning Labor Day Matinee. "Sir".

"Well?"

"You have been staring at me?"

"Not that I am aware of."

The young gentieman, evidently a student, was about to retire with an apology when the person addressed—a banker—thought proper to add:

"You are altogether too insignificant an individual for me to stare at you."

"Sir, that is an insult! I shall challenge you. Here is my card."

After a moment's hesitation the banker also gave up his card. The cards were inscribed as follows:

"Count Botho von Felsing, student of philosophy."

"Ernst Grunschild, banker."

half might suspect something from his looks, he went straight to his place of business and began to write letters to his friends containing the customary last farewell greetings in case he should fall a prey to a "windlettve and quarrelsome opponent." It was 7 p. m., and the cashier called, as usual, to present his report. Grunschild ran his eye listlessly over the balance sheet. Suddenly he gave a start.

"A thousand marks drawn for private use! What does this mean? Come; this is above a Joke!"

"Have you forgotten, Herr Grunschild? You were playing at the cafe, you know, and lost a thousand marks, and as you hadn't that amount on you Count von Felsing was good enough to call for the money on his way. He showed me your visiting card in proof of his statement."

Grunschild hardly knew whether he should go into a fit with vexation or whether he should shout for joy. He had been done out of a thousand marks, but at the same time it was "off" with the duel. ### FLAG ETIQUETTE.

Displaying the National Ensign at Half

Mast.

There have been many mistakes made about the etiquette of the flag When President William McKinley was assassinated thousands of loyal Americans raised flags at half mast over their places of business and let them fly by night and by day until they were out. They undoubtedly thought they were showing respect to McKinley's memory. But they were not showing proper respect to the flag. The United States government display ed at that time its flags at half mass from sunrise to sunset from the presi from sunrise to sunset from the president's death until his burial. The government regulations provide that on the death of a president in office its flag shall be displayed at half mast only one day.

In memory of the 350,000 Union soldlers who lost their lives during the civil war May 30, Memorial day, each year the United States displays its flag at half mast at all army posts, stations year the United States displays its flag at half mast at all army posts, stations and national cemeteries from sunrise to midday. Immediately before noon a dirge is played by the band or field music, and the national sainte of twenty-one guns is fired. At the conclusion of this memorial tribute at noon the flag is holsted to the top of the staff and remains there until sunset. The idea is that the national ensign is too sacred an object to be long in mourning for any man or number of men, no matter how exalted their rank. The flag reversed, with the union down, indicates distress. The flag on anything but a fort actually besieged should never be displayed between sunset and surrise.

A VIRGINIAN.

He Suffered in the French Revolution, but Took His Revenge.

The king, fearful lest his people should throw off his yoke as they had thrown off that of their own sovereign, began to look out for those bent on fomenting rebellion. Americans, who up to this time had been looked upon with favor by royalty, the nobility and the people, were now viewed with suspicion by the government. A few days be-

Fyle, having been a political prisoner, had nothing to fear from the revolution. Indeed, he was carried out on the shoulders of the mob and amid their acclamations. Had it not been for a purpose he had in view he might have been tempted to become one of the leaders in the cause of freedom. But his purpose now that he knew the countess was safe kept him in another channel. His object was to find the whereabouts of the three men who had conspired against him. remained in Paris. He had joined the revolutionists and was a power among them. The other two, being royalists and known to have been the cause of the imprisonment of many persons on accusation of disloyalty, had gone to Belgium.

Pyle's first intention was to settle with De Pavnes. But an open attack upon a man who was daily sending people to the guillottne would only result in disaster. It was 2 o'clock in the morning when De Pavnes started for home. Pyle left a few moments later, following the man he sought until the two wars alone in a narrow, deserted street at the base of Montmartre. What Napoleon Couldn't De.

An incident connected with Napoleon when he was in exile in Eiba is commemorated on the island to this day by an inscription affixed to the wall of a pensant's house. A man named Gisconi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plow handles and attempted to guide it himself, but the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus:

WEDDED THE DEAD.

Guer Marriago Ceremony That Was Performed in Japan.

The tragic ending of a Japanest love story is reported by the Japan Chronicle from Tsuzuki, a little seasified village in the province of Shizuoka.

Ono Matsusaka, twenty years old fell in love with Ono O-bun, a girl seventeen years old. The young couple sought the consent of their parens, and the father and mother of the girl refused to sanction the union. The two lovers decided to commit suicide rather than be separated. By appointment they met at a trysting place that had been the scene of their love waking and embarked in a fishing bont. At a point some distance from shore they bound themselves together with some cloth brought along to serve that purpose and threw themselves into the sea.

Committing "shinju," as lovers' suicides are called in Japan, is such an ordinary occurrence that little attention is attracted by it, but this tragedy was followed by something exceptional in Japan.

When He Didn't Stutter. When He Didn't Stutter.

A confirmed stutterer went into a restaurant and met a few casual acquaintances, who at once commenced chaffing him most unmercifully respecting the impediment in his speech. At last one of them, a pert little fellow who had been making himself rather conspieuous by his remarks, said, "Well, old man, I'll bet suppers round you can't order them with round you can't order them with out stammering." "D-d-d-done," says Brown, and, to the astonishment of Brown, and, to the astonishment of the company and the discomfort of the challenger (all of whom were unaware of his being, as is often the case with stutterers, a first class singer), the beckoned the waiter and sang the order without the slightest hitch, then turning round to his tormentor, said "N a-n-now, y-y-y-you ese-e-can p-p-pay."—Argonaut.

and Was Served on Toast.

Never ask any one to supply you with a missing word, says a writer in the Atchison Globe, and if the experigood advice. A woman was engaged recently in writing a letter to a friend, in which she was telling of what they had to eat at a party. She was getting along very well when all of a sudden she stopped to think. "What," she called to her family, "is that green stuff that grows up straight?" "Evergreen trees," some one replied. "Oh, no," said the woman; "I mean something to eat."
"Onions," was the reply.

A MISTAKE

It Was Embarrassing, but Turned Out Well.

ciation.]

One summer I alighted from a stage at the entrance of a hotel beside a New Hampshire lake. There were several persons sitting on the porch, and one, a young girl, arose and advanced with a happy smile to meet me. If there is one thing I have always prided myself on it is keeping my coultokes when on it is keeping my equipoise when people speak to me whom I don't remember. I had no idea who the girl was, but did not propose to betray my ignorance. She put out her hand and put up her lips. Not to give her the expected kiss would have been a rudeness.

That was about as sweet a kiss as I ever enjoyed. Whether it was because her lips had a peculiar flavor to them, whether it was that it was unexpected or whether there was a natural predipositions.

"How did you leave Katherine?"
"Very well."
"Why, she hasn't recovered, has she?"
"I mean she's doing very well."
"Oh!"
"I think I'll go in and register, getting rid of the satchel at the same time. I'll be with you in one moment."
Entering the office, I found a clerk and asked if Miss — I stumbled on the name.

"Miss Ellison?" supplied the clerk.
"Did she say anything about a room

"Did she say anything about a room for me?"

"Yes, but she didn't expect you on this train. However, I can take care of you."

While we were talking I was running my eye back over registered names until I came to "Mrs. Montgomery Ellison, Miss Edith Ellison, Detroit," I didn't know a soul in Detroit, so I was now quite sure the young lady had mistaken me for some one else. I must let her down easy. It occurred to me that to put my name on the hotel register might betray the situation, so, the clerk turning to inspect his key rack, I left him without doing so and walked toward the door."

"You have not registered."

"I will do so presently." And I walked out on to the porch and joined Miss Ellison. My next move was to discover what My next move and the first material wish to know those to know those table wish t

"Two years last month."

I wished to ask where we were when we parted and, above all, whether we were lovers. How could I frame a question to get this information without making a break?

"I'll bet you can't remember your last words," I said playfully, "on the day I left you."

"I can," she said—"'don't forget the candy.'"

"What a memory!"

"It was delicious. I almost made myself sick."

I was puzzled. Candy is sweet, but I fancied the last words of a young girl to her lover before parting for two

"Yes. Weren't you saying you've had a change of heart?"

"No! What put that into your head?"

"Oh, tell me about that most important thing to you!"

"The most important thing when you left; not now. Well, I was to have a new dress, and I was in a great quandary as to whether I'd have it made up with large or small sleeves. You know, then they had been wearing small sleeves so long that there was sure to be a change very soon."

I gave an impatient grunt. I was not getting on. Here was I playing the part of another not knowing whether that other was cousin, uncle, brother or lover. The situation was distressing.

This was said with an expression of disappointment.
"What you mistake for being bored," I said, "is really pain. When I left to the said, "is really pain."

My next move was to discover what relationship Mr. Wardwell bore to her. It was to be supposed that he was her lover, but I was not certain, "You've changed a little since I saw you," she said.
"Do you think so? Let me see—how long is it?"

Into a laugh.
"Frank," she said, giving him a duplicate of the kiss she had given me, "this is Mr. Edwards. He came an hour ago, and I mistook him for you. Had not Mrs. Gordon, who knows him, told me when he went in to register who he is I should have continued to he deceived."

"Thank God!"

"And this is the explanation," she continued, with a smile, "of what I was saying to you. But what is the 'thank God' for?" turning away her face and continuing the smile.

"For two things—first, that you declined the offer and, secondly, that Mr. Wardwell is your half brother instead of your lover."

"This is quite too much." she said, rising, "for an hour's acquaintance. You should speak to Mrs. Gordon."

I left that hotel engaged.

OLD TIME PUNISHMENT.

Agony of a Day in the Stocks For a Fit of Sad Temper.

A record on file in the library of congress contains an account of the adventures of a certain Hubbard, who was sentenced in Boston to the stocks for having indulged in an unwarrantable fit of fill temper, says Harper's Weekly. When he had taken his seat for the day there came along a drove of swine, which seemed to cast upon him those leering looks that only a fat pig can bestow. A dog followed, suiffing at the prisoner's feet and making feints—unpleasantly approaching reality—of biting him. Then a cock, mounting to the very top of the stocks, crowed his derision upon the victim below, and presently a rough fellow, after indulging in ugly taunts, threw at him fetid tondstools and a dead spake.

Value of the Kangaroo's Tail.

So important is the kangaroo's tall in his rapid progress that experienced thunters with guns are accustomed to fire at the point where this appendage joins the body, when, the tail being disabled for its office of balancing, the animal is as effectually stopped as if hamstrung. Hit elsewhere, except with a rife buillet or at point blank range, the kangaroo is pretty likely to get off. One peculiarity of the kangaroo is that, after being started up, he very rarely swerves from his course, through which peculiarity he is easily "potted" by hunters, who conceal themselves while a man on horseback drives the herd toward them.

A battle between these two natural enemies is well worth witnessing. It is nish always, and probably the snakes by this time have come to understand that when they enter such a combatit is with the odds greatly against them.

The mongoose is quite as clever a ring general as the cat and uses that if to advantage. Strategy more than strength is its asser.

When they ener, and if the snake were no avenue of escape, it prepares for battle, as does the mongoose, but a more leisurely manner. It takes about one minute for them to get fully prepared. There is no shaking hands, so to speak, as by prizeighters.

A Fairly Good Appetite.

Kaffirs, North American Indians and the fat boy in "Pickwick" may well be quoted as fearful examples of vobe quoted as fearful examples of voracity, but even their grastronomic feats are exceeded by the full grown Eskimo, who will daily eat twenty pounds of fiesh and oil if he has the chance, while on the authority of Admiral Saritcheff a Yakut of Siberja has been known to consume in twenty-four hours "the hind quarter of a large ox, twenty pounds of fat and a quantity of melted butter for his drink."

Colors of the Stars.

Although there is no relation apparent betwen the two phenomena, yet it is interesting to recall the fact that among the stars certain colors appear to characterize different stages of change, or evolution. Red stars, according to the testimony of the spectroscope, differ widely in their constitution from white or yellow ones, and it has been thought that varying colors may give a clew to progressive changes in the heavenly bodies. The following may help residence subscribers determine which class of service best meets their needs and make clear some apparently obscure points.

district plan does not proportionately curtail the subscriber's actual use of the telephone.

Professor Jackson, the Highway Commission's expert. took careful records to ascertain the number and destination of calls from each exchange to points within the Metropolitan and Suburban districts. He found that, aside from calls for the seven Metropolitan exchanges, only 14% of all Suburban calls went outside districts composed of a particular exchange and its contiguous Suburban exchanges. Hence, the great majority of Suburban users would not be adversely affected by reason of the creation of such districts, but, on the contrary, distinctly benefited when all the advantages are

The present lowest unlimited Suburban rate obtainable is a four-party line at $30 a year. The new lowest unlimited Suburban district rate—a two-party line with divided ringing is $21 a year in "E" districts, $24 a year in "F" districts, $27 a year in "G" districts and $30 in "H" districts. Here, then, is a reduction of 30, 20 and 10 per cent, respectively, in three classes of exchanges, and the substitution of a two-party line with divided ringing for a four-party line, with other benefits which will be referred to later.

In this connection three important points should be considered the reduction in the annual rate, the reduction of the toll rate to and from Boston, and the improvement in the service which will result from two-party lines with divided ringing in place of four-party lines. Each of these is divided ringing in place of four-party lines. Each of these is a part of the same problem.

II. The reduction of the 10-cent toll rate to five cents to all exchanges within five miles of Boston on April 15, 1908, and the present extension of the 5-cent radius to eight miles, is part of the general plan of revision and reduction, and must fairly be considered in connection therewith.

It was distinctly stated that this 1908 reduction was tentative and part of a general plan, but to be made in advance of other changes. These further changes are indicated in the new rate schedule.

Professor Jackson's figures show that 20% of the calls originating in the present Suburban territory are for the seven Metropolitan exchanges in Boston—Main, Fort Hill, Haymarket, Richmond, Oxford, Tremont and Back Bay. It follows in the toll rates, too, there is a substantial reduction.

The reduction from 10 cents to 5 cents on Boston calls applies to the following exchanges within an 8-mile radius (including those to which the 5-cent reduction was tentally follows in the following exchanges within an 8-mile radius (including those to which the 5-cent reduction was tentally follows in the follows in the following exchanges within an 8-mile radius (including those to which the 5-cent reduction was tentally follows in the follows

Such a Bore to 'Oress.'

A belatted traveler who was compelled to stay all night in a backwoods cabin says that soon after the frugal meal a tall, gaunt youth of eighteen and an equally sallow and gaunt girl of seventeen, both barefooted, took their hats from wooden pegs in the wall and prepared to go out, whereupon the mother, taking her pipe from between her teeth, said repipe from between her teeth, said repipe from between her teeth, said re-

III. The substitution of two-party lines with divided ringing for four-party lines will tend to the improvement of service.

It is obvious that the fewer parties there are on a line, the more valuable the service, as there is less interference in using it for outward calls and less likelihood of its being Divided ringing, on a two-party line, provides for only one ring of the bell and that for the number wanted. It eliminates any annoyance or confusion resulting from a multiplicity of bell signals. It will remove one of the common causes of complaint, and, coupled with the substitution of the two-party for the four-party line, will work a material improvement in the subscriber's service.

IV. The measured service features of the new plan offer distinct advantages to those having special or limited requirements.

For example—There is a measured rate giving for $24 480 calls, which may be used to any exchange, Metropolitan or Suburban, within an eight-mile radius. Additional calls, if made within the exchange district, are 3

Here is a case in point: Among the recent inquirers at the Milk street office was a professional man residing in the Newton South exchange, whose telephone service was costing him about $42 a year—$30 for a four-party residence telephone and about

He estimated that two calls a day would meet his actual needs, and he was delighted to learn that these needs (730 calls, including 120 calls to Boston,) under this measured service schedule, could be given him for $32,30, as against the $42 he now pays. ## DETECTIVE WIRELESS.

A Chase After a Man With a Big Diamond.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

It was a put up job on the part of Merford, who hated me like poison. We had both worked together in the Kimberley mines, I as foreman, Merford with the pick. It was at this time that I detected him in an effort to carry out diamonds in his throat. I carry out diamonds in his throat. I considered it my duty to report him.

Then came my big find. I was walking one day far from any mine with no more thought of diamonds than of doughnuts. One of my kids wasn't well, and I was out after fresh milk for him. I walked without finding what I wanted till I was tired, then sat down on a rock to rest. While sitting there my eye became fixed on a stone beside me about the size of a walnut.

Sitting on deck last night in a secluded corner suddenly a passenger flashed a match to light a cigar. Mrs. Michiel rod to the folds of her dress. The case is being discussed in the smoking room, and some say that the diamond thieves to know how the officials will manage to take the diamond as well as the thieves."

"The Michiers today had a terrible quarrel. Passengers in staterooms o two weeks to get to her destina-ion and can send word of her com-tion and can send word of her com-ing and order his arrest?

Procuring some ostrich eggs, I bor-rowed a calico dress and a sunbonnet and went into a town to sell the eggs.
Posters stared me in the face that $5,000 was offered by the company for any arrest. That was all I wanted to know, and I didn't stay in the town. my arrest. That was all I wanted to know, and I didn't stay in the town ten minutes. But I stuck to my wo-man's disguise. There were risks in man's disguise. There were risks in appearing either as a man or as a woman. I concluded that so long as I didn't mingle much with people I was safer as a woman.

Well, to do a little skipping in my story, when the ship Unicorn sailed from a port in the Transvaal for South from a port in the Transvaal for South-ampton, England, on the passenger list was the name of Barton Dexter and wife. Two days after the vessel sailed a man stepped into the office of the agent of the diamond company and said that he knew where the man they wanted was. After securing pa-pers that would give him the £5,000 offered for my capture in case it came through his information, he told the agent that Barton Dexter was none other than Edward Michier—in other words, myself.

The case was at once put into the bds of a prominent detective agen-y with instructions to see that the o called Dexter be arrested on arriv-l and held till an identifier arrived.

And so the attention of the world was concentrated on a man and a woman in midocean on the British ship Uni orn, who had robbed the kimberley mines of an immense diamond, out whose game was to be spoiled on als prival at Southsmatch, by a ganthman iron scotland Yard.

A hundred or more American newspapers wired passengers on board the Unicorn to send them news of Michier. I can't give all the items that were sent, but I will give a few from a single paper:

"Michier is a small, delicate man, with a feminine voice; his wife is board that they are under suspicton, and they seem very much troubled. At first they were on deck the same as other passengers. Now they keep to their stateroom nearly all day."

"It is now pretty well determined that Michier in addition to being a diamond theft is eloping with Michier, for no one would accuse so gentle a man of leading such a woman."

"While Michier and his wife were sitting on deck last night in a secluded corner suddenly a passenger flashed a match to light a cigar. Mrs. Michier was seen to thrust something under the folds of her dress. The case is being discussed in the smoking room, and some say that the diamond thieves will throw the stone overboard if argrested on the ship. All are interested to know how the officials will manage to take the diamond as well as the thieves."

Nothing is clearer than the fact that the system of landholding in the most incient races was communal. Private right in land was for a long time su-known, the source of life being held in common between the members of the tribe. Not only land, but all property that in any way had to do with the general welfare, was looked upon as belonging to the whole tribe in com-mon, no individual having the right to call it his own. Gradually and after a very long time, under the old regime, the right of private ownership began to creep in until at last it became the recognized rule pretty nearly every-where.—New York American.

He got $500 advance before starting to work and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got $500 more and asked for the third $500 as an advance before finishing the tale.

"The editor in an effort to save money apparently declared that, after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than $1,000—this when he had the two installments in his office.

Old Friend—Your plan is a most extended to take the content of the most important matters for lords.

One of the most important matters is the preparation of the patent, a long strip of parchment, to the end of strip of parchment, to the end of which is affixed the wax seal, the color of which varies, according to the rank of the new member. Another item is the robe, made of scarlet cloth with three doublings of ermine, the number of bars varying according to rank. Thus a duke has four bars in front and the same number behind, a margulus one less, and so on.

Then there are preparations in regard to making or changing coats of arms, in connection with which fees to the extent of about 50 guineas are paid by the recipient of a summons to the bouse of lords.

"Gind to meet you, Mr. Bennett! Take a seat, and we will talk matters over."

"There is one feature of my uncle's will that gives me a good deal of annoyance," remarked the young man, seating himself near the lawyer.

"Which one is that?"

"Which one is that?"

"The one obliging me to marry a girl I have never seen. It is perfectly ridiculous!"

Next year will doubtless bring him important chairmanships and greater prominence. He is sure to be reelected by an increased majority.

Last week's issue of Practical Politics, whose Editor writes from close personal knowledge of the facts, says of him:

"Rep. Bean, although a first year man, was put on Railroads and Federal Relations. On the latter Committee he was put at the head of the new members, and seconded Chairman Brown in the latter's speech against the income tax.

A keeneyed Democrat discovered that the Republican Town Committee, in their call for a caucus, had accidently omitted to include Congressional delegates, and, on promise of secrecy, communicated the fact to other Democrats, one of whom to other Democrats, one of whom blabbed, and the Republicans got hold of it and had just barely time enough to have the Star stop printing the no-tice until the correction was made.

If that cost a great many people a bunch of money," said an oil operator. "It was during the time when a big strike meant a drop in the price of oil. The foreman of a drill crew had been in structed by the employers to use a code in the event of oil being found. If it was a big flow he was to wire. The trees grow tall. If, on the other and, the flow was small, 'Pine trees grow small,' was to be the code message. The drill struck a gusher, and the following message was sent by the livery topped individual: 'Pine trees grow tall as hell, and she is flowing all over the derick?' The largest sword of which there is any record is the seven foot ceremonial sword that was made for Edward III. and is now preserved in Westminster abbey. Next comes the "sword of ceremony" that is used at Webs eisteddfods. This weapon if placed in the hands of a modern Godfrey de Bouillon, who, it will be recalled, with a two handed sword cleaved a Turk into halves from the shoulder to the hips, would be quite long enough for any one who wished to put it to practical use. Now Miss Seawell reasons correctly that all these privileges must be resigned at once by every woman who acquires a vote. A wife upon obtaining the bailot, would have to give up all claim to maintenance upon anyone whomsoever, except upon public charity.

In all I spent four months traveling and lecturing in the eastern cities of the United States and mer many men of the race I had never foresigned at once by every woman who acquires a vote. A wife upon obtaining the bailot, would have to give up all claim to maintenance upon anyone whomsoever, except upon public charity.

In this connection, a related consequence of woman suffrage, not mentioned by Miss Seawell, may be fointed out. As the possession of the bailot would deprive woman of all property privileges, so also it would nullity many existing laws for the protection of working women. Laws limiting the daily or weekly work time of women have been held by the courts to be constitutional because women are in the subordinate position of wards of the state.

In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth alto-gether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant. Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.

when I was called to the chair of mental philosophy in the University of B., a woman's college. I was given to rationalism, materialism and all that group of isms popular at the time and was fond of embodying them in my lectures to my classes, I dictated these lectures, and they were taken down by the students in blank books. I was lecturing one morning, my subject leading me into something at which the girls pricked up their ears. This was the passage that attracted

Amid another titter, this time not at my expense, I signified that the discussion was ended by proceeding with my dictation. Unfortunately there was a lot more in my lecture on what I a lot more in my lecture on what I called the emotion of love, and I feared that Miss Swann or some other mem ber of the class would trip me up again. I would have omitted the rest a promise." were it not that I could not do so and that brought about more trouble:

That the emotion is human instead of divine is indicated by the fact that a love which has existed for years may turn to hate. Again it may be lost. Indeed, without another mental faculty, memory, it cannot continue even through life. There are many instances where, the faculty of memory having been destroyed, persons have not even been comizant of those they have loved. As the brain is a camera as well as a storehouse of photographic plates, so love—produced by the perceptive faculties of an organic brain.

Smothered groans were mingled with the sound of scribbling. To escape from a situation which I considered appalling I closed the book from which I had ben dictating and, rising, bowed a dismissal to the class. Half the girls had risen to hurl back my views; but, the lecture being ended, they were unable to do so. A dozen came to my desk with defiance in their eyes; but, taking up my hat, I said with a smile: "Pardon me, young ladies; I have an engagement at this hour, and to be on time I must go at once."

That was the last lecture delivered before that class. I knew that a storm of opposition to the views I had expressed would meet me on my next en

I did so and left by a midnight train, giving as a reason for my sudden action and departure that I had discovered on myself what I presumed to be symptoms of leprosy and not for worlds would I communicate the disease to any one else. The University of B. never saw me again. Indeed, I never lectured again, devoting myself to original research. I learned afterward that had I not resigned voluntarily I

"Girlies," Frederick Thompson's oig musical production which has been crowding the New Amsterdam Theatre all summer, will be seen at the Boston Theatre next week for a limited en-gagement. With Joseph Cawthorne and Maude Raymond at the head of a cast of 100, the organization which in-cludes 'That famous chorus of 60 girls' will come here intact to present, down to the most minute detail, the down to the most minute detail, the sensationally successful satire exactly as it was shown during the months of June, July and August on Broadway. In its review of "Girlies" the New York Herald called it "A shower of beauty, melody and fun," and thousands of Manbatten theatregoers, supported by thousands from other cities who regard the metropolis as a summer resort voted the show as "just that."

Castle square.

"The Crown Prince," George Broadhurst's play which John Craig will produce at the Castle Square is a lively romantic play. It resembles "The Prisoner of Zenda," not in plot, but in manner. Its scenes are laid in the mythical kingdom of Rhodoland, where dwells a beautiful queen and whose Minister of War is in love with her. The dashing crown prince of the neighboring kingdom of Morantia has been engaged to the queen of Rhodoland since infancy, and for four acts the entangled web of love and adventure is deftly woven and made cleverly amusing in dialogue and situation. As the hero of "The Crown Prince" Mr. Craig will be seen to exceptional ad-CASTLE SQUARE. Craig will be seen to exceptional advantage.

Historical Possessions. Our former citizen, Dr. Ephraim Cutter, in a communication to this Our former citizen, Dr. Ephraim Cutter, in a communication to this paper, submits the proposition that the present citizens of Woburn ought to prize more their historical possessions, and cites at cousiderable length several instances where the people of Woburn have been notable in the past First, Edward Johnson's "Wonder-Working Providence," published in London, 1654, a copy of the original edition having been sold recently for $237 Having ascertained the exact weight of this amount of gold, and finding that the copy of this book weighed less than that amount of gold, and finding that the copy of this book weighed less than that amount of gold coin, it showed that its being worth its "weight in gold," was less than the actual fact.

Dr. Cutter's second point is that Edward Johnson, the author, was a carpenter at a time when the proportion of Highley.

penter at a time when the proportion of educated men in New England was one in thirty.

His third point is that it is the ear

His third point is that it is the earliest regularly printed history of New England. It was a very religious book, because the people of New England at that early date were the 'most religious people' of the world. Dr. Cutter dissents from the opinion that this book has the label of superstition upon it, and says, 'So far as it is not sustained by the Bible, I agree. When I was in Newcastle upon-Tyne in England in 1862, a house was pointed out where my ancestors had lived for more than 250 years, and out of that house, said
my informant, a Church of England
Warden, 'went one of them to a prayer Warden, 'went one of them to a prayer meeting—for which he was hanged' No wonder the family emigrated to where religion was free. Doubtless Edward Johnson migrated for the same reason, and no wonder he was strenu ous and nervous, and uttered such words as found in the phrase: 'Stand words as found in the phrase: 'Stand it out against all who come to rob you of your privileges!' "

We are sorry that our space forbids our using more of Dr. Cutter's communication. He eulogises the members of the present Johnson (amily, condemns monopolies, and sees much io Johnson's day that is of worth now if it were revived in Woburn.

FORT HILL 7600 RATE DEPARTMENT

WE are now ready to answer inquiries of present or prospective subscribers relative to the new rates. Call at 119 Milk Street, or 165 Tremont Street, Boston. Calls by telephone from any part of the Metropolitan or Suburban District to the "Rate Department," Fort Hill 7600, may be made without charge.

Applications for changes to the new rates will be filled, so far as is possible, in the order they are received -"first come, first served."

As these applications are accumulating with great rapidity, it is necessary that those desiring early changes should APPLY AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE.

If subscribers cannot call in person at either of the specified offices, they are invited to call by telephone, as indicated above.

It is firmly believed that a winter of rare social and public entertainments is in sight for this town.

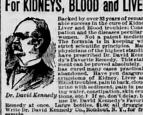

The Star, an excellent paper, is opposed to Boston absorbing the entire suburban territory. That's right. Congressman S. W. McCall is Chairman of the Winchester delegation o the Republican State convention. It is ever thus. It seems that something is happening about every day to delay cars on the B. & N. trolley line. More care should be observed, and the line double tracked.

Some of our people are up in arms over the new telephone rates. One of them is a member of the Committee of 23 chosen at a meeting held by 31 suburban towns and cities in Boston last week to protest against the change and take steps towards forcing the Edison Co. to back down.

The dentistry business in this town is scheduled for an early boom. At a meeting of dentists here the other day the astounding fact was unearthed that 90 percent of the children in our public schools receive no instruction in taking care of their teeth! Mercy sakes alive! Just think of it—90 percent of the pupils trying to get along and live without the skillful aid of our dentists! Well, that beats me! Who'd have thought it? The wonderful and lamentable discovery means that the author-ties must hereafter employ dentists for the schools.

THE PONY EXPRESS.

Fearless Riders and the Dangers and Hardehips They Faced.

Perhaps the most picturesque figure on the old trail was the pony express rider. The overland stage proved too slow for mail and express in its flight from the Missouri and the Pacific. True, it had cut down the months of the old or teem to treatly find dark

True, it had cut down the months of the old ox team to twenty-five days, and still there was a clamor that the east and west be brought closer together, and it was done. The pony cut the time to ten days.

Those who were personally acquainted with the famous pony express of those days could never forget the intropid rider who braved all peril, for getful of self, intent only on the speedy delivery of his precious mechila to the next hardy horseman. Hard and fast he rode over mountain speedy delivery of his precious mochila to the next hardy horseman. Hard and fast he rode over mountain and plain, across scorching desert and ley snow, through sunshine and rain, past friend, away from foe, to the final achievement—the safe delivery of his charge.

Forty fearless horsemen in saddle riding west, as many more riding east—and this novel but useful enterprise was in motion. For two years the pony express carried messages of business and love across 2,000 miles of western mountains and plains, over a country peopled with a hostile race, destitute of cultivation or development, through a region wild, desolate and little known.

It was in 1859 that the pony express was established. The route, briefly stated, was due west from St. Joseph to Fort Kearney, up the Platte to Julesburg, thence, by Fort Laramie and Fort Bridger, to Salt Lake City, thence to Camp Floyd, Ruby valley, the Humboldt, Carson City, Placerville and Folsom, to Sacramento and San Francisco by boat.

ville and Folsom, to Sacramento and San Francisco by boat.

The intention of the pony express was to carry letters only and not more than ten pounds at a trip. It was decided that the safest and easlest mode of carrying the mail was to make four pockets, one in each corner of the mechila a covering made of heavy leather for the saddles and generally used by the expert Mexican and Spanish riders. The mochila was transferred from pony to pony and went through from St. Joseph to San Francisco, the pockets containing the mail being locked and opened only at military poster note and at Salt Lake City. A Great Asset In Business as Well as In Society.

There have been great advocates at the bar whose charming manner, like the presence in court of some of the world's famous beauties, would so sway the jury and the judge as to endanger and sometimes actually divert justice, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magnzine. A gracious, genial presence, a charming personality, a refined, fascinating manner, are welcome where mere beauty is denied and come where mere beauty is denied and where mere wealth is turned away. There is always a premium upon a charming presence. Every business man likes to be surrounded by people of pleasing personality and winning manners. They are regarded as splendid assets.

"Sarah, you are right. I have never done anything. I have been quite use-jess, but I will show my worth."
The effect on Henry was remarkable. The next day bright and early from the bridge to allow the racing train time to stop.

And now his iron constitution, which won him collegiate sporting fame, served him well.

But he must go faster. He had but little time. He tried to walk on his broken leg, but it would not support him. He must crawl again. Oh, if he could only run, even for a minute or two! But hark! Even now in the distance he hears the whistle of the approaching train. Disappointed, he stops his mad race and fixes the torpestops his mad race and fixes the torpestory. stops his mad race and fixes the torpedoes securely to the track.

Now he waits, but not for long. The train reels around the curve. Suppose the torpedoes should fail! But his fears are groundless. As the train passes, one torpedo after another explodes with a deafening roar, the brakes are slammed on, the engine and coaches groan, creak and come to a standstill. The train is saved!

Exhausted and no longer upheld by the intense excitement, he sank down unconscious. In this condition he was found by the trainmen. From letters in his pockets his identity was estab-

It is merely the survival of an old custom. When the Turks still lived in Tartary, before the time of Mohammed, it was the habit of the men to steal such women for wives as attracted them. This ted to so much fighting that about the second century after Christ the Turks came together and decided that henceforth the women should go veiled and should not meet men, but dwell in narems, as soon as they arrived at womanhood, which was at about eleven years of age.—Mrs. Kenneth Brown in Metropolitan Magazine.

One Failure.
"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband who had just refused his wife a new dress in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well." replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."
